Up Speaks Earl Beatty. And Eke Gen. Tanaka. Et Tu, Canada, Babies Create Vitamin C.

By ARTHUR BRISBANE

EARL BEATTY, admiral of the British fleet, has common sense. He thinks Britain should regulate her own naval strength, decide questions of defense for herself, not asking opinion or permission from other countries. Many Americans feel the same about their own national defense, and wonder why a people of 123,000,000 should be less independent than Washington's U. S. A. of 4,000,000.

Admiral Beatty, who wants Britain to "throw off the shackles of international agreements" and do as it thinks best, spoke from the deck of Nelson's old wooden flagship, Victory, at the beginning of British naval week. As he complained of England's "pitiful weakness at sea," Beatty had near him on one hand the British fighting ship "Hood," "largest warship and fastest battle cruiser in the world," and nearby the "Nelson," finished in 1927, "the world's most powerful battleship."

THE COUNTRY which actually allowed England to tell us that our guns must not be elevated to produce a longer range has no ships to compare with the two mentioned.

But there is comfort in the knowledge that if war came, those "fastest, most powerful" etc., ships would be carefully hidden away, to protect them from airplanes and submarines. That happened in the last war, when England's grand fleet went out once, to meet the Germans in the uncertain battle of Jutland, turned around and raced home again to hide with nothing accomplished.

We need not worry about $75,000,000 foreign battleships, if we have enough $50,000 fighting planes, and inexpensive submarines.

The trouble is that we have not either, and our "professors" seem not to realize their importance.

FOR COMIC RELIEF, as you consider our lack of adequate defense, you may read a speech by Gen. Tanaka, formerly Japanese military attache at Washington. This gentleman, apparently lacking the usual diplomatic tact of experienced Japanese, calls "INSOLENT" President Roosevelt's speech concerning the efficiency of the United States naval base at Hawaii. He resents what he calls the President's "loud praise," which, of course, was intended as a compliment to the navy men in charge.

SUPPOSE AN American official spoke in similar terms of the Japanese emperor, what excitement would ensue. We do not claim for F. D. Roosevelt any parentage of the sun, moon, or stars, but we do assert his right to praise any unit of national defense, if he chooses to do so. Enough intelligent Japanese have crossed this country and gone up and down in it, to let Japan know that the United States proposes to protect and rule its side of the Pacific, and is able to do so.

SOME OF OUR best minds, that have been shipping dollars and securities to Canada, for safe keeping, out of the reach of our "radical confiscatory" government, will shudder reading the speech of Harry Stevens, Canadian Minister of Trade and Commerce. This gentleman says "big business," made up of "unscrupulous financiers and business men," exploited Canada's consuming public, starved her producers, sweated her workmen, gouged her pulp, paper and other industries, and left her with a choice of reform, dictatorship or revolution.

ALL THAT you may read in a pamphlet, signed and published, and considered the start of a Canadian "new deal." And poor innocent American capitalists thought Canada was smooth, safe, a haven for the man with money and afraid of his shadow. Is there no place where the rich man may lay his head and his money in peace?

THAT TEXT about being "fearfully and wonderfully made," applies especially to young babies. We knew that young babies have big brains, in proportion three times bigger than the adult brain, which makes it dangerous to excite them, sending all the blood to the young brain, away from the small stomach.

We knew also that baby has an enormous liver, far bigger in proportion than his father's, in which enough iron is stored up to take him through his milk diet days, milk containing no iron, although otherwise a wonderful food.

Only now do we learn, from scientific highbrows of the University of Strasburg, that infants, up to the age of five months, manufacture in abundance their own vitamin C, essential to life, and later, extracted from orange juice, fresh vegetables, fruit, tomato juice. Without this vitamin, young children would die of scorbutic diseases. They gradually lose the vitamin C producing power, between five and fourteen months of age. After that food must supply the vitamin. Remember that, in raising your baby.

RELIEF ADMINISTRATION workers in New Jersey on government payrolls are ordered to cut hay, grass, weeds, on uncut lands or along the roadside for shipment to starving cattle in the West. Farmers that get the hay will know they are handling expensive fodder. The cost on broken-tipped scythes alone will be considerable. City relief will find it hard to keep the pointed end of the scythe out of the ground. If the New Jersey dried grass, weeds, etc., sent to the West as hay costs, delivered, less than $100 a ton, the government will do well. But workers will learn to swing a scythe, there is no better exercise and taxpayers have lots of money left.

LODGER KILLED AS 2 SCUFFLE

Six men were turned over to the homicide squad for further investigation today in connection with the death of Stanley Takis, 45, who died in Allegheny General Hospital yesterday after his skull was fractured in an altercation at the Improvement of the Poor, 1001 Webster avenue.

Magistrate John B. Kearney, in Center Avenue Police Court, ordered the six turned over to detectives following the testimony of Policeman Clarence Everett at a hearing today.

Both Gordon and Sharkey were ordered held, along with Frank Burch, Patrick Hayes, Ray Short and John Hild, who were detained as witnesses.

According to Sharkey, Takis and Gordon became involved in a quarrel with Hild, who, Sharkey said, was intoxicated and demanded a change of rooms at the home.

The clerk said Gordon ejected Hild and in the scuffle Takis was struck on the jaw and knocked down, his head striking a concrete floor.

Moslems, Jews Clash In Algiers, 25 Dead

ALGIERS, Algeria, Aug. 6.—(AP.)—Twenty-five persons were reported killed and hundreds hurt in two days of rioting in Constantine.

Moslems and Jews battled throughout the city, and the rioting subsided only after the arrival today of three trainloads of troops from Algiers.

Cavalryman Dies In Horse's Plunge

ALTOONA, Aug. 6.—(AP.)—A fall from a horse caused the death today of Wilford Dollar, 22, member of the 104th Cavalry. Dollar was hurdle-jumping and his horse tumbled after failing to negotiate a hedge. The accident occurred Saturday.

Starved and Tortured Inmates Charge; State Quiz Asked

The storm of complaint which has rattled noisily against the closed doors of the Butler County Home today produced these developments:

1—The Butler County Commissioners asked the State of Pennsylvania's Department of Welfare to investigate charges of cruelty to aged inmates of the county home.

2—New charges of inhumane treatment were made after Fred C. Herold, the superintendent who is under fire, permitted a reporter for the Sun-Telegraph to talk with inmates.

3—Herold, denying the charges, countered with accusations that the women inmates had turned their prayer meetings into petting parties, that the same women were forever asking for their "boy friends."

By MARGARET GARRAHAN
Staff Correspondent.

BUTLER, Pa., Aug. 6.—The State of Pennsylvania today was asked to investigate the charges of cruelty to inmates of the Butler County Home.

This request—following charges of inhumane treatment of aged and feeble folk—was made unanimously by the three Butler County Commissioners. It was proposed by Commissioner Edward R. Turner, who last April sponsored the appointment of Home Supt. Fred C. Herold, against whom the accusations are made.

MAKES SECRET PROBE

A state investigation, it is declared, would not interfere with the proposed grand jury inquiry of District Attorney Edgar H. Negley.

Even before the County Commissioners acted, Supt. Herold had thrown open the doors to a reporter for the Sun-Telegraph and permitted questioning of inmates alone—a privilege which hitherto he had denied even to District Attorney Negley.

And startling new complaints of cruelty followed.

He allowed a reporter to question a score of the inmates.

Half of them were satisfied with Herold's administration, the other half complained of mistreatment.

Herold, too, conducted an investigation of his own. Among the 140 inmates he distributed questionnaires asking whether they were ever mistreated.

He refused to reveal the results of this inquiry.

CHARGES INJURY

Annetta Blair, 73-year-old inmate, told of Herold's refusal to allow continuance of prayer meetings on the first floor of crippled women unable to attend chapel service upstairs. She added:

"He made them stop bringing me hot milk at night, too. I have a friend who brings me chocolate malt and I used to have some before I went to bed."

"Then, too, I saw him grab a piece of bread from that lady one night and throw it in the slop bucket, and this lady over

Sobs Love For Jailed Pastor

International News Service.

CATSKILL, N. Y., Aug. 6.—A frightened, nervous girl of 17 waited in her home today to see what the law is going to do to the 31-year-old minister with whom she eloped, but who was returned to the Catskill Jail, under a Mann Act charge, before they could be married.

Evangelyn Edson said today:

"I can't talk. I can't give details. I can't give a story. The police told me to say nothing, and I must obey."

She was asked:

"Will you marry Frank Clough now?"

"I can't talk—I—Oh please, they won't let me talk."

The girl a choir singer, pretty, blonde and the daughter of a respected Catskill family left Catskill five days ago with Clough, the minister. Police, after a search instituted by her parents, located them in a hotel in Bridgeport. They had not been married because of the Connecticut Law requiring a lapse of five days between application for and granting of a marriage license.

Short of money, according to Clough, they had registered together, until a friend arrived with the necessary funds with which they might marry. They were hungry, broke and discouraged.

The girl sobbed:

"But I love Frank and I will marry him yet, somehow."

Clough said he lived in Columbus, O.

Catskill police said Clough had served a term at Clinton Prison, at Dannemora, for stealing an automobile. He was sentenced in 1928.

BOY FIGHTS 'LAKE DEATH' CHAIR

International News Service.

WILKES-BARRE, Pa., Aug. 6.—The Edwards family, pioneer residents and founders of the tiny village of Edwardsville near here, began raising a defense fund today in an effort to save one of their members from the shadow of the electric chair.

While Robert Edwards, 21-year-old mine surveyor, sat dejectedly in Luzerne County Jail's "murderer's row," his friends, relatives and counsel were chipping in to raise money for his defense in the slaying of Freda McKechnie, Bobby's neighborhood sweetheart, who was to become a mother.

Rumors were rife that efforts will be made to retain the services of a noted criminal lawyer, possibly Charles J. Margiotti, famous Punxsutawney and Pittsburgh lawyer, who recently was a candidate for Governor. Members of the family refused to confirm the possibility that Margiotti might become chief defense counsel at Edwards' "American Tragedy" trial.

Perfecting his plans to contend that Edwards could not have killed Freda—that she was already dead from shock when she was struck by the blackjack Bobby was said to have stolen from his father—Attorney Leonard Morgan, chief defense counsel, visited Harvey's Lake, scene of the tragedy, over the week-end. Morgan expects to build his defense around the contention that Freda died when she learned that Edwards wanted to "throw her over" for Margaret Crain, 23-year-old East Aurora (N. Y.) music teacher he had met at a teachers' college.

MISS HELEN BRENNEN . . . MARRYING JUDGE MARSHALL

Miss Brennen, 24, his stenographer until he went on the bench, tomorrow marrying Judge Thomas M. Marshall, 50, of Common Pleas court. Miss Brennen lives at 28 Sheridan avenue, Bellevue.

JUDGE THOMAS M. MARSHALL

HE'S HEARD LOT OF CUPID WOES

Judge Thomas M. Marshall, who has presided at so many divorce cases in the last year that he can't remember the total, today swung around to the other extreme; he's going to be married tomorrow.

Judge Marshall made no secret today of the fact that he and Miss Helen Brennen, of 28 Sheridan avenue, Bellevue, will be married.

Until he was elected to the bench in 1931, the comely Miss Brennen was a stenographer in Judge Marshall's law office.

The couple will be married either in Chicago or Pittsburgh. If arrangements can be completed today, the wedding will take place tomorrow in Chicago, with the Rev. Father Francis Dolan, a friend of the bride, officiating. If not, they will be married in the Epiphany Church in Pittsburgh by Judge Marshall's friend, the Rev. Father Lawrence O'Connell.

After the wedding the couple will visit the Judge's only son, Robert Marshall, 16, at Beaumaris, Canada, then go on to White Sulphur Springs for a honeymoon.

DER FUEHRER SOBS PLEA FOR PEACE

Hindenburg Innocent Of War Guilt, Nazi Chief Cries

BERLIN, Aug. 6.—(AP.)—From the rostrum where on July 13 he defended his killing 77 "revolutionaries" and declared he was Germany's law, Adolf Hitler today paid solemn tribute to the late President Paul von Hindenburg and prayed for the peace, freedom and honor of Germany. The Chancellor-leader said:

"Deputies of the German Reichstag, men and women of the German people! I implore you all now to look beyond this transitory moment into the future. Let the strong realization enter our hearts: The Herr Reichspresident Field Marshal Gen. von Hindenburg is not dead.

"He is living. For in dying he now wanders above us amidst the immortals of our people, surrounded by the great spirits of the past, as an eternal patron and protector of the German Reich and the German nation."

DEFENDS HINDENBURG

Hitler declared the late President was "as innocent of the beginning of the war as anybody in the world could be," pointing out that when the conflict began in 1914, von Hindenburg was living in retirement, having taken his discharge from the army at the age of 64 on March 18, 1911.

The new leader of Germany praised von Hindenburg as a military commander and declared:

"Had the political leadership of our people during this period been congenial with the military, Germany would have been spared the greatest humiliation ever to go down in history."

He said that the World War broke upon a German people "sacredly convinced of having been attacked without their guilt."

AUDIENCE HUSHED

The Chancellor's address, delivered before a hushed audience in the Kroll Opera House—which still serves as the temporary Reichstag building following last year's fire—was non-political in character, although he made frequent references to the principles of his own regime in tracing von Hindenburg's career.

"We want to preserve the miracle of this new resurrection of our people as a precious inheritance of a great age and we want to pass it on to the generations that come after us. He who thus observed fidelity

Schwab Well Again, Physician Reports

LORETTO, Pa., Aug. 6.—(AP.)—Charles M. Schwab, retired steel magnate, has entirely recovered from an attack of indigestion which confined him to his bed several days last week.

Dr. Daniel F. Rice, of Ebensburg, his physician, said yesterday:

NEW ORLEANS 'FRONT' QUIET

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 6.—(AP.)—The "armies" of Senator Huey P. Long and Mayor T. Semmes Walmsley stuck to their guns today in the bloodless "battle of New Orleans."

Mayor Walmsley, who is politically "out" with Kingfish Long, said he would keep the City Hall strongly guarded by policemen with machine guns just as long as Long and Gov. O. K. Allen retain possession of the voters' registration office building with the state militia.

Last night as the police observed the transfer of a load of submachine guns into the National Guard "camp" they uncovered their 14 submachine guns in City Hall and announced they were ready for any emergency.

Senator Long has temporarily dropepd out of sight after visiting for several days in the executive mansion at Baton Rouge.

FARMERS FAIL TO HALT SALE

DOYLESTOWN, Pa., Aug. 6.—(AP.)—Several hundred farmers and other home owners massed at the Bucks County Courthouse today in a futile effort to halt a public sale of 1,900 homes for delinquent taxes.

Despite the demonstration and an appeal from Gov. Gifford Pinchot for a postponement, the sale got under way, though an hour and 15 minutes behind schedule.

Men, women and children, four abreast, paraded through Doylestown while state officers stood guard with riot sticks and county detectives guarded courthouse corridors.

The sale was made to satisfy delinquent 1931 taxes. Most of the properties are in the farming districts.

The sale was to have included at least 3,000 homes and farms, but late Saturday the County Commissioners announced that the sale of properties seized for delinquent 1932 taxes would be postponed for another year.

The Governor telegraphed the Commissioners:

"I urge you most strongly to stop this sale."

He also wired former United States Senator Joseph R. Grundy, political leader of the county, urging him:

Marie Dressler's Home Goes on Sale

BEVERLY HILLS, Cal., Aug. 6.—(AP.)—To close the estate of the late Marie Dressler, stage and screen star, her beautiful Georgian home here was placed on sale today. The house contains five bedrooms. The real estate firm offering the home quoted no price for it.

OLSON FORBIDS USE OF TRUCKS

International News Service.

MINNEAPOLIS, Aug. 6.—Gov. Floyd B. Olson, as commander-in-chief of the National Guard, today "cracked down" on both sides in the Minneapolis truck drivers' strike.

Gov. Olson clamped a rigid dictatorship over the city by ordering military authorities to keep off the streets all trucks except those carrying necessities, such as bread, milk, ice, fuel and gasoline. This was a blow aimed at the employers. At the same time he struck at the strikers by ordering the National Guardsmen to stop all picketing.

The Governor's orders became effective at 12:01 a. m. today. Preciously he had set midnight as the "deadline" for both sides to get together and end the strike by agreeing to the revised peace proposal of the federal mediators, the Rev. Francis J. Haas and E. H. Dunnigan.

Olson declared his order would expose the "chiselers" among the employers and show "where the fault rests for this situation."

Stricken Preacher Unconscious 98 Days

BOSTON, Aug. 6.—(AP.)—Rev. Edward P. Short, 56, pastor of the Church of the Redeemer in Warren, Pa., unconscious for 98 days following a cerebral hemorrhage, today continued to amaze specialists at St. Elizabeth's Hospital.

Physicians, who did not expect him to live five days after he was stricken, said that while he was growing weaker, he appeared to sleep normally at times.

Sidney Fox Sued By Florist Over Bill

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 6.—(Universal.)—Sidney Fox, featured screen actress, known in private life as Mrs. Sidney Fox Beehan, bought $67.78 worth of flowers and then forgot to pay for them.

That was the charge on file today in Municipal Court, where she faced suit for that amount in a suit filed at a local florist.

Loses Propeller, Lands Plane Safely

TIFFIN, O., Aug. 6.—(AP.)—Skillful piloting enabled Milo Burcham, 31-year-old Los Angeles stunt flier, to make a successful landing here today after the propeller dropped off his biplane while he was flying at a height of 1,000 feet over this city.

Bear Drowns in Zoo Pool As Mate Tries Rescue

COLUMBUS, O., Aug. 6.—(AP.)—Lena, one of the black Michigan bears at the Columbus Zoo, drowned in her pit yesterday in spite of what some folks say were efforts of Jake, her partner, to rescue her.

The pair had cuffed each other around the pool all afternoon and then Jake retired to his den to rest and meditate.

Lena continued performing for the crowd of spectators, eating their peanuts and dancing. Maybe a peanut choked her; suddenly she teetered on the edge of the pool and fell in. Her thrashing attracted Jake who lumbered out and tried—the spectators averred—to extend her a helping paw. Jake fell in on top of her and thereafter his only effort was to get himself out.

Keeper William Evans, who attempted a rescue, was kept off for 15 minutes by the raging Jake, until other attendants could force him back to his den with crowbars. Lena was dead when they pulled her out.

U. S. TO 'PURGE' INVESTMENT BANKERS

Pecora Group Charges 'Shocking' Methods In Bond Sales

Declaring banking houses used "shocking" and "scandalous" methods in selling the public billions of dollars of securities, many of which have become almost worthless since 1929, the committee declared:

"Many of the abuses in investment banking have resulted from the incompetence, negligence, irresponsibility or cupidity of individuals in the profession.

"Such abuses can be eliminated only by the elimination of such persons from the field. Other abuses are inherent in the American system and are, therefore, susceptible of remedial legislation."

MORGAN NAMED

The Banking Committee made this statement in the second chapter of its report on the Senate's stock market and banking investigation. In the course of which it cited past practices of J. P. Morgan & Co.; Kuhn, Loeb & Co.; the National City Company; Dillon, Read & Co., and others. The firms distributed domestic securities totaling $55,000,000,000 and foreign bonds exceeding $7,000,000,000 since the war.

The committee offered no suggestions as to how unfit bankers may be eliminated, but made an analysis of the practices revealed.

REGULATION PROVIDED

A good many of these now are subject to regulation by the Securities and Exchange Commission, set up as a result of the inquiry. Ferdinand Pecora, chief counsel for the investigation, is a member of the commission. Rules designed to eliminate many of the criticized methods will be issued by the commission soon, probably this week.

The report cited the preferential lists of several firms whereby persons prominent in political life and other fields were offered stocks at prices under the market. It found that such practice, whatever else it indicated, did create "a community of interest and similarity of viewpoint between donor and donee which augured well for their mutual welfare and ill for that of the public."

FRAUD CHARGED

The committee found "flagrant misrepresentations and concealments" in the selling effort of some investment firms, reported that they sold securities despite the adverse reports of subordinate officials, and estimated that 43 per cent of foreign securities sold the American public are now in default.

It blamed the investment banker for not curbing the "speculative fervor" of the public and said he "negged prices" to insure sale of unstable bonds.

LOAN CONTRACT NEARLY READY

Members of the Allegheny County Authority Board expect to receive the contract through which the Public Works Administration will make a loan and grant of $24,500,000, ready for their signatures, Wednesday, it was reported today.

Assistant County Solicitor Ralph H. Frank, who aided in preparing the agreement, will submit the contract to the board as soon as PWA officials approve the final draft.

Although City Council is expected to override his veto, neither the City Planning Commission nor the city Public Works Department has backed down on its stand that an additonal $800,000 will be needed to make the original $1,400,000 project satisfactory. Present plans would cause intolerable traffic conditions, city officials maintain.

Son Fails to Save Mother Shot by Man

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 6.—(INS.)—Despite the blood donated by her son in an effort to save his mother's life, Mrs. Adele Klinger died in a hospital here today from the effects of five bullet wounds allegedly inflicted by George Hubbard Smith, 56, said by authorities to have been the woman's sweetheart.

Smith was in the same hospital, suffering from a bullet wound received when Mrs. Klinger's 17-year-old son, William, grappled with the man for possession of the revolver immediately after the shooting Saturday.

Fugitive Youth Captured in Home

ALLENTOWN, Aug. 6.—(AP.)—Frank Charles Dreher, 19, who fled from the state industrial school at Huntingdon, July 16, has been captured because he returned home and went to sleep confident the search for him had been dropped.

Dreher, with two other youths, drove away from the school in an automobile belonging to a state official.

Joan Lowell To Add Two To Family

MISS JOAN LOWELL

Universal Service.

NEW YORK, Aug. 6.—Although she has turned thumbs down on such routine methods of acquiring a family as romance and marriage, Joan Lowell, "adventure girl," today announced that she expects to have four children within the next three years.

Between movies, books, lecture tours and trips to the headwaters of the Amazon, Joan plans to amass a family by adoption, she declared.

Characterizing romance as "the bunk," the authoress, sailoress and exploreress had this to say:

"You'd think the jungle night scented with its white orchids like waxen clouds in the velvet night and its vibrant silence would be swell for romance, wouldn't you?

"Well, I did. But men don't. They slap mosquitos, snore and say 'When do we get out of this so-and-so jungle?'

FASCISTS EXILE DUCE'S AIDE

ROME, Aug. 6.—(AP.)—Leandro Arpinati, former undersecretary of the Interior, was sentenced to five years on Italy's prison island today for alleged efforts to sow discord in the ranks of the Fascists.

He has been under arrest since July, when the charges against him first came to light. Two days previously he had been read out of the Fascist party.

Twenty Fascists from his home town of Bologna were ousted from the party a few days later, accused of having connived with him in activities against the Blackshirt hierarchy.

Arpinati, in his banishment to island imprisonment, has sunk to the depths from the heights of the Fascist regime. As recently as September, 1932, he was referred to as "Mussolini's right hand man."

In May, 1933, he resigned as undersecretary of the Interior. On March 1 of this year he was dropped from membership in the Chamber of Deputies. On July 23 he was expelled from the Fascist party. His arrest followed three days later.

Weissmuller Sued For U. S. Income Tax

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 6.—(AP.)—Four Hollywood celebrities were charged with owing the government additional income taxes in liens on file today in Federal District Court.

Peter John Weissmuller, husband of Lupe Velez and known to thousands as "Tarzan," is alleged to owe $929 for the year 1932. Grant Withers owes $1,094 for 1930, the lien alleges. Ernest Laemmle owes $43 for 1923, and William Boyd, $470 for 1932, it is alleged.

Pauper's Grave For Once Rich Princess

MRS. KATHERINE GORDON

International News Service.

NEW YORK, Aug. 6.—Unless friends or relatives intervene, a pauper's grave awaits Mrs. Katherine Gordon, 55, the former Princess Rigo, widow of Prince Rigo, world-famous gypsy violinist, and widow of Lieut. Gov. Edward Gordon, of Florida, it was revealed today.

Mrs. Gordon, who once possessed considerable wealth, died in poverty yesterday.

Hospital authorities said they hoped a sister living in Philadelphia, whose name was unknown to them, might arrange for her burial.

Last January while she was a hospital patient, thieves broke into Mrs. Gordon's modest apartment and took her jewels, valued at $10,000, all that remained of her fortune.

Mrs. Gordon was the former Katharine Hadley, daughter of a Yale professor and cousin of the famous actress, Clara Ward.

At the time of her marriage to Prince Rigo in 1910 he was at the zenith of his career. They traveled throughout Europe and played before royalty.

In 1927 Prince Rigo died and shortly afterward the princess was married to Lieut. Gov. Gordon, who died in 1932.

American's Home In Cuba Bombed

HAVANA, Aug. 6.—(AP.)—A bomb exploded today in the home of R. Marsden Leeder, an American attorney recently accused by supporters of former President Grau San Martin of being implicated in an alleged attempt to defraud the Cuban government through the manipulation of titles on lumber properties once owned by former President Gerardo Machado.

Although the bomb destroyed the front part of the house and police said it must have weighed 50 pounds and was one of the largest ever exploded in Havana, no one was injured.

Fights With 'Countess,' Then Joins Foreign Legion—Almost

By GEORGE LAIT
International News Service.

MAIDENHEAD, England, Aug. 6.—Lord Edward Montagu, 28-year-old son of the Duke of Manchester, was the laughing stock of the smart set today because of the publicity attendant on his decision to join the French Foreign Legion and play the role of Beau Geste in North Africa, a determination he has since discarded.

Montagu's decision to enlist, it was learned today, was made in striking a heroic pose after a fight with a girl friend at a night club party. His Lordship told friends the legion rejected him because he failed to pass the physical examination, but the truth is that when the gold gray dawn broke at Dunkirk, Eddie decided he preferred Maidenhead to Morocco. And he never attempted to don the baggy red pants of the legion.

WAR AT NIGHT CLUB

The inspirer of the would-be Beau Geste was the "Countess" Dumas, wife of a bogus count who is now in jail serving four months for forgery. She is the 28-year-old daughter of a Glasgow potter.

It was the fag end of a party at the Music Box, a night club on Thames side, when Eddie and Betty battled. Montagu struck an attitude and said:

"I'm through with all this. Especially I'm through with women. I am going to join the Foreign Legion, go to the desert and forget all."

He was somewhat taken back when Betty acidly said:

"Go ahead."

He went on:

"I know life will be very hard. I know what I am in for. It's going to be very tough."

DROPS HERO ROLE

His resolution lasted as far as the French coast. Instead of going to the gendarmerie station to enlist he went to the Cafe des Arcades, where he sat drinking wine and thinking it over until 1 a. m., when he suddenly announced he was not joining the legion.

Now he is being kidded to death by his friends. Eddie and Betty have made up, the Maidenhead party is on again. But "Count" Dumas gets out of jail Saturday.

PLOT TO BOMB HOSPITAL BARED

Gunman's Sweetheart Marked for Death By Gangsters

WASHINGTON, Aug. 6.—(AP.)—Frank S. W. Burke, chief of detectives, had asserted today that a tri-state gang recently broken up had planned to dynamite the Upper Darby (Pa.) Hospital to kill Mrs. Elizabeth Fontaine, a patient described as a gunman's sweetheart who had "talked."

Burke said the information came to police through a "stool pigion" and officials had deemed it wise to transfer the patient under protection of a heavily armed guard.

Two men charged with crimes attributed to the gang, Arthur Misanas and John Kendrick, are held in the district jail. Misanas will be sent to Richmond for trial on a charge of robbing a bank.

The fatal shooting of William B. Phillips, 28, in a fight with a Washington policeman last spring, started the drive which ended activities of the gang.

Shortly afterward Mrs. Fontaine was wounded at Upper Darby.

WOMAN ROAMS LOST, HUNGRY

Missing from her home for nearly a day, a 70-year-old Swissvale woman was back with relatives today after she had suffered a harrowing experience from fatigue and lack of food.

Mrs. Martha Barchfeld, of 7504 Trevanion avenue, Swissvale, left her home Saturday to visit a sister in Carrick. She became confused waiting for a street car and wandered.

Yesterday, nearly exhausted, she sought help at the home of Mrs. Marie Ward, 349 Beech street, East Pittsburgh. After aiding the aged woman, Mrs. Ward notified police and a foster daughter of the woman, Mrs. William Provan, Swissvale, was located.

When identified, Mrs. Barchfeld had a nickel and a street car token.

PARIS SUBURB WARS ON AUTOS

Universal Service.

PARIS, Aug. 6.—Enraged by a rising toll of deaths caused by Sunday motorists, 1,500 residents of the Paris suburb of Cachan today staged an anti-automobile revolt, blockading a highway en masse and compelling motorists to detour.

Angry cries rang through the air as the irate suburbanites shouted:

"We do not want any more of our children killed. We do not pay taxes to provide a pasture for automobiles."

Finally police intervened and the citizens agreed to reopen the highway. A police squad was assigned to slow down the motorists, who previously were in the habit of speeding through Cachan. In six months, automobile accidents there have caused 28 deaths and 39 injuries.

CLOWNS ROUT INDIAN CHIEF

TOWSON, Md., Aug. 6.—(AP.)—The Sunday quiet of this small Baltimore suburb was considerably ruffled yesterday when an Indian chief, attired in featherly regalia, was chased from his medicine truck by a small mob of clowns.

The chief, so police reported, had not paid the clowns their salaries of "wampum" for helping him sell "lightning alligator oil," and was in a fair way of being scalped.

Badly reversing Custer's last stand, the chief, his bright feathers beating a tattoo on the breezes behind him, fled into the arms of the law for protection.

The prematurely born infant has meager chances of living, Dr. W. M. Brooks, attending physician, said.

Tiny though she is, Eva Nadine is well developed. Black-haired and active, she has a reasonably loud crying voice and attempts to put her tiny fist in her mouth.

She was born Thursday morning and has been fed with an eye-dropper.

WILLED $10,000, SHE DEMANDS RICHES

Points to Codicil as Confirming Her Assertions

As women will, they used to wonder why the late Frederick J. Osterling, wealthy Pittsburgh architect, never married.

Today a woman came forth from Jefferson County to break a long silence and reply, in effect:

"But he was married; he was my husband."

The woman is Martha O. Aber, of Markton, near Punxsutawney, and her attorneys, Charles J. Margiotti and Sebastian Pugliese, were preparing to go into court to attack the will of the late architect.

Already the lawyers have sent notices tao the executors of the Osterling estate, which approaches one million dollars, that they seek to prove that Osterling and Martha Aber were man and wife, by common law.

They will point to a codicil Osterling attached to his will in which he left $10,000 to her.

But they will ask for more than $10,000; they want a widow's share, many times greater.

Osterling, who designed the Union Trust Company Building—a classic in architecture—and the H. C. Frick mansion in New York, died a month ago at 3503 California avenue. He was 69.

9 MEN KILLED IN MINE BLAST

BIG STONE GAP, Va., Aug. 6.—(AP.)—At least nine men were killed in an explosion in the Derby No. 3 mine of the Stonega Coke and Coal Company today.

Two men had been brought out alive and were taken to the Stonega Hospital for treatment.

Several other bodies were believed to be still in the mine.

PROBING GIRLS' MATCH DEATHS

International News Service.

WORCESTER, Mass., Aug. 6.—Declaring he noted "highly suspicious and unexplained circumstances," Medical Examiner Baker today requested a police investigation into the deaths, a week apart, of two girls who were burned to death by having their clothing set afire.

Grace Turner, 12, died early today. Her playmate, Barbara Moriarity, 7, died a week ago.

Dr. Baker and the girls' parents were convinced the children did not play with matches, although burned matches were found nearby.

Weather Conditions

The low pressure area that was centered over Western North Dakota Saturday morning was centered over Nebraska Sunday morning, and it remained about stationary during the last 24 hours. It is causing some cloudiness over the Mississippi Valley and light to moderately heavy thundershowers at scattered places. It is also causing high temperatures in the plains states. High maximum temperatures of 100 degrees or higher occurred yesterday over Nebraska, Kansas, Oklahoma, most of Iowa and Missouri and over Arkansas. The highest reported is 110 degrees at Omaha. High pressure is located over the lake region and [illegible] cool weather over the lakes, [illegible] Valley states and eastward to th[illegible]. Pressure is high also in the far [illegible] west.

River Conditions

The rivers are falling. Stage at Franklin is one-tenth foot below zero; Lock No. 7, Mon., 11.1; Pittsburgh, 10.1; Dam No. 4, 9.2; No. 6, 9.5; No. 10, 9.3, and No. 12, 9.7. The dams are up.

Mystery 'Widow' Claiming Estate

FREDERICK J. OSTERLING

Mr. Osterling, the late famous Pittsburgh architect, pictured a few years ago at her Markton (Pa.) home with the arm of the woman named as "Miss Aber" in a hand-written codicil to his will around him. Willed $10,000, "Miss Aber" as Mrs. Martha O. Osterling cites a common-law marriage, seeks a widow's share of the million-dollar estate that he left for disposal.

"MISS MARTHA O. ABER"

'STARVED AND TORTURED' AT POOR HOUSE, AGED CRY

HOME'S PRAYER MEETINGS WERE 'LOVE ORGIES,' HEROLD SAYS

here just got her suitcase back today. They must be getting scared; they took all of our clothes from us, you know, and locked them in the storeroom, and now they're giving them back. Mr. Graham (former Supt. Howard Graham) was always good and kind, but not him."

Nancy Herbison, an inmate for eight years, exhibited a helpless arm, mute evidence, she said, of a setto with Herold shortly after his arrival, as she attempted to take a cup of coffee from the dining room to her quarters. She explained:

"I wanted to drink it after some medicine—I couldn't drink water—and he grabbed my arm. No, he didn't twist it, but something happened. I've never been unable to use it since. See, I can't lift it."

At another time, Mrs. Herbison said, the superintendent broke open her suitcase and ordered it thrown out into the yard, and later sent to the storeroom. She declared:

"All my best clothes were in it. So was my great-grandmothers' wedding dress. I've never seen it since."

Asked about food, she said:

"Until about two weeks ago, we got hardly enough food to live on. We got a new cook about that time, and since then we've mutton at every meal. Before, we got it only at breakfast. We've had eggs only three times since Mr. Graham left last April."

'JAILED,' HE SAYS

Katie Albert, 61, who has been at the institution for 14 years, complained that twice she had been ordered ejected for talking with neighbors. Once, she said, she went.

Then there is A. W. Bortmess, 84, who said that he had been imprisoned for two days without water.

Inmates classed "workmen" it is understood, receive butter at all meals and enjoy comparatively heavy menus. On the opposition trenches was A. C. Hutchinson, 81, and seven-year inmate, who said:

"I'm perfectly satisfied. As far as the "jail room" there's so much talk about goes, an institution like this has to have a lot of discipline. Yes, I was in it once, for about 30 minutes when I refused to scrub floors, but when my friends told Mr. Herold that I wasn't able to scrub, he let me out right away.

"As far as I can see, the whole thing is just faction, both inside and out. I personally, have not suffered any mistreatment, nor have I known of any."

NURSE ADDS COMPLAINT

Siding with Hutchinson in the pro-Herold camp was A. T. Gibson, 73, home watch and clock repairman, who said:

"If I can't say anything good about a person, I don't say it, and I'm talking now, because I've always been treated fairly."

Other Herold backers were Nemiah and Mary McCandless and William Wiles, all of whom pay for their room and board.

ON BUTLER HOME GROUNDS

termed "quite a change of mind" by Mrs. Katie Milholland Dill, nurse fired a week ago after four weeks vacation. She said:

"They're afraid to state conditions because of threats made to them.

"I know what it's like. They even took my belongings, and, remember, I was not an inmate. They also took away my keys, one of which was to the medicine closet."

LOVE 'ORGIES' BLAMED

Charges that the elderly ladies' sitting room prayer meetings were love orgies and the preachers "quacks," were made by Herold in justification of their discontinuance.

He said:

"Those men just came and told them love stories, and all during the week I'd have women coming in and asking me to call so-and-so at once, it was important. They'd say he's my boy friend. So I just stopped the meeting."

He gave indecent actions in public on the part of several male inmates as the reason for locking the door leading from the men's dormitory to the lawn in violation of fire regulations and dismissed other complaints with the comment:

"You know, of course, that almost all of the women here are feeble minded. About 50 per cent of the men are too."

SCHENCK, STAR TO MARRY

Universal Service.

LONDON, Aug. 6.—Joseph Schenck, film producer, today confirmed his engagement to Merle Oberon, English film actress, according to a dispatch from Nice, France, in the London News Chronicle.

Schenck, who was divorced recently from Norma Talmadge, is quoted as saying:

"It would be premature to talk of our wedding day, but it is quite true that Miss Oberon and I are engaged."

The first report of the engagement came from Hollywood in a story by Louella O. Parsons, Universal Service motion picture editor.

Miss Oberon and Schenck arrived in Monte Carlo a few days ago. She is one of the most beautiful women in Europe, her most prominent film role being that of Ann Boleyn in "The Private Life of Henry the Eighth."

Schenck is president of United Artists Company.

M'CREADY WILL FIGHT SNAGGED

Aged Dr. R. J. McCready received another setback today in his struggle to obtain more than $1,000 a month from his late wife's estate when Judge Ambrose B. Reid dismissed exceptions he has filed to an Orphans Court decision upholding the will.

Shortly after today's decision, Attorney R. T. M. McCready said he would appeal to the Supreme Court in behalf of his 82-year-old cousin.

prominent New York husband is suing for annulment of their marriage, married him for love and not for his money, she said today.

In an exclusive interview in an is living with her mother and a younger sister, the beautiful 20-year-old brunet said:

"I am sorry about the suit, because I loved Clendennin and still like him a lot. He is a nice fellow. It is all my mother-in-law's fault. Clendennin was greatly under the influence of his mother.

"You know, he has little money of his own; what he has comes from his mother. Somehow she and I did not agree. As for my part I am prepared to fight it through. Both of us are Catholics, we were married in a Catholic Church, and for Catholics the marriage is indissoluble.

"I would still be ready to forget all the shame and injustice and return to my husband, though, of course, I would not return to my mother-in-law. But I am ready to fight if I am forced to. I shall return in September to the United States."

'BABY'S GREAT,' DEMPSEY SAYS

International News Service.

NEW YORK, Aug. 6.—"Mister, you can take my word for it, she's the greatest baby in the world."

Jack Dempsey passed out the cigars today and commented on the husky daughter born to Mrs. Jack (Hannah Williams) Dempsey in Polyclinic Hospital.

The former heavyweight champion was gratified but not surprised at having the prize infant of the universe. He denied in some detail that he was disappointed because the baby was not a boy. In fact he produced a theory to show why it should not have been. He said:

"Generally speaking, the first child should be a girl. A girl cemen's the love of the parents, you might say. The second child should be a boy and then a girl and then a boy and then a girl and so on."

And that, Jack indicated with a self-satisfied puff on his promotorial cigar, is the way he intends to arrange it.

BOARD UNPAID, CHILD HELD

JERSEY CITY, N. J., Aug. 6.—(AP.)—The Chancery Court had before it today the unusual case of a woman who is holding the 2-year-old child of a New York actress for unpaid board.

The human collateral is the little son of Mrs. Beatrice McNahey, of New York City. The woman who holds him is Mrs. Clara Gross, of North Bergen, who maintains:

The unpaid board bill is $250.

Mrs. McNahey brought the case into court by securing an order directing Mrs. Gross to show cause why she should not return the child to his mother.

She told the court she placed the child with Mrs. Gross to board on June 5, 1933 at $10 a week. She lost her job after that and on January 1 asked for the child, offering to pay $20 in cash and the balance of the $80 then due in $5 weekly installments. But Mrs. Gross, the complaint said, refused the settlement.

The small boy was caught by a huge wave which lifted him from the beach into a swimming pool. The Prince was one of those who plunged to the aid of the choking lad and pulled him to safety.

Prince Edward pointed out that he was only one of a number surrounding the pool at the time. Many persons crowded about to congratulate him.

Shortly after the incident, the Prince returned to his villa. He arrived several days ago for a vacation.

King George at Race Despite Bad Weather

COWES, England, Aug. 6.—(INS.)—The famed Cowes regatta week opened in cloudy, blustering weather today, but King George was not deterred from his part in the ceremony.

Father Cox Begins Assessor Survey

The Rev. James R. Cox, appointed city assessor by Mayor McNair last week, took up his duties today with an inspection of properties in the Hill district, Oakland and Squirrel Hill.

He was accompanied by Oscar C. Stoehr and Charles L. Brinton, the other newly appointed assessors, and Engineer Donnell D. Reed.

MYSTERY GIRL FOUND SLAIN

HOLLISTER, Cal., Aug. 6.—(AP.)—State police and local authorities sought today to establish the identity of a young woman whose battered body was found on a little used road near here yesterday.

She had been beaten, police said, then carried in an automobile to the Old Rocks road two miles southwest of San Juan and thrown onto the rocky ground.

Mrs. Anne Perry, of San Francisco, was on her way to Hollister today on the possibility the body might be that of her daughter, Aileen, 16, who disappeared July 23.

Meanwhile, Tulare authorities questioned a man who applied at a hospital last night for treatment of a gash on a shoulder, a wrenched hip and cuts and bruises. The officers said he refused to give his name or state how he was injured.

An autopsy performed by Dr. L. C. Hull indicated the girl was unconscious but not dead when she was thrown from the car.

COX AWAITS FASCIST REPLY

His decision to accept the proffered national leadership of the Khaki Shirts United States Fascisti, Inc., awaits word that state leaders have accepted his conditions, Father James R. Cox said today.

Twelve state commanders were to confer with him yesterday. Father Cox reported, but only one showed up, Frank J. Viririto, of Baltimore, state commander. He does not know what delayed the others.

The conditions under which he will accept the job as commander-in-chief, Father Cox says, are that he will be accepted as national commander for 25 years, and that his orders will be final.

This means, he explains, that he would dictate the purposes of the entire organization.

CHILD 'FINGER' IN TRIANGLE SLAYING

Daughter Points Out 'Other Woman' to Evangelist

Universal Service.

WICHITA FALLS, Tex., Aug. 6.—Attorneys today made plans to save 12-year-old Betty Harrison from testifying against her mother, pretty Mrs. Wilma Harrison, 32, evangelist, who Saturday shot and killed Mrs. Cora Hawthorne, 35, in a crowded department store.

Mrs. Harrison, preacher in a gospel mission, said she killed Mrs. Hawthorne because she was the "other woman" in her husband's life. Her defense, she indicated, will be the "unwritten law."

Held by the grand jury under $5,000 bond, the mother and daughter were taken to jail Saturday night, after Betty related the details of the shooting to the District Attorney.

Whether Betty will be held as an accomplice in the murder was undecided, despite her admission that she pointed out Mrs. Hawthorne to her mother, Betty said:

"I went into the store and found the woman. My mother came in and took a gun from her handbag; then she shot the other woman."

"Now my papa can come home."

Approaching Mrs. Hawthorne, the gospel mission preacher called her name. As Mrs. Hawthorne turned about two shots struck her, one in the temple and one in the body. She died instantly. As the shots were fired, Betty in childish fright placed her hands over her ears.

Her father, B. C. Harrison, proprietor of a small shoe shop, said he knew Mrs. Hawthorne, but never had any particularly close associations with her. Mrs. Hawthorne's husband is serving a prison sentence for robbery.

CONVICT SLAIN IN BREAK

International News Service.

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo., Aug. 6.—One convict was slain and another wounded seriously when they attempted to escape from the state prison here today.

The slain prisoner was Mansel Rinker, serving 50 years for bank robbery, and the wounded man was John O'Brien, serving 30 years for first degree robbery.

The men had sawed the bars of their cell and were on the roof of Warehouse No. 1, inside the prison walls, preparing to cut some electric light wires when a utility guard, A. W. Bender, discovered them.

Bender called on the two convicts to surrender and when they refused he fired at them, killing Rinker and wounding O'Brien.

NEPHEW FIGHTS $275,000 WILL

An appeal from the probate of the will of Miss Margaretta Curry, of 5812 Solway street, disposing of a $275,000 estate, has been filed in Orphans' Court in behalf of Henry Curry, a nephew.

Ella Graubert of Patterson, Crawford, Arensburg & Dunn, counsel for the nephew, said the appeal is based on grounds that the woman revoked her will by drawing lines across its pages and scratching out the names of the subscribing witnesses.

After distributing $21,000 to various charities, Miss Curry bequeathed the balance of her estate to her brother, Charles L. Curry, of Warriors Mark, Pa., and a score of other relatives.

PAINTER KANE HAS RELAPSE

John Kane, the aged Pittsburgh house painter, who won international fame as an artist until illness forced him to abandon his work, was reported "worse" by his physicians today.

The doctors said the veteran artist would have to be returned to the hospital, but held out little hope for his recovery. He will be 74 on August 19.

Allenby Stricken On Canadian Visit

TORONTO, Aug. 6.—(AP.)—Field Marshal Viscount Allenby, here to attend the Canadian Corps reunion, was ordered to a hospital by his physicians last night. Doctors said he must take a complete rest.

Attending a Royal Canadian Yacht Club dinner, Viscount Allenby was stricken with a nasal hemorrhage, the second in a day.

ROOSEVELT SET TO SAVE FARM, INDUSTRY

EN ROUTE WITH PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT TO WASHINGTON, Aug. 6.—(AP.)—President Roosevelt traveled on to new western developments today with a declaration that his administration is just beginning a war on individual selfishness "to save our resources of agriculture and industry."

This statement of battle in a Congressional election year was laid down last night from a tourist cottage on Two Medicine Lake high up in Glacier National Park.

Today, Mr. Roosevelt rode his special train to Glasgow, Mont., where he hopes to inspect another dam — Fort Peck — on the Upper Missouri. The project will harness this stream against floods and provide, eventually, power and navigation for the region.

President Roosevelt is closely reviewing the efforts of the government to make the Columbia and Missouri rivers of the Northwest provide places for families of the congested areas elsewhere.

WINNING FIGHT

The President, in a radio address, said:

"I believe we are building a better comprehension of our national needs.

"People understand, as never before, the splendid public purpose that underlies the development of great power sites, the improving of navigation, the prevention of flood and of the erosion of our agricultural fields, the prevention of forest fires, the diversification of farming and the distribution of industry.

"We know more and more, that the nation must and shall be considered as a whole and not as an aggregation of disjointed groups.

"May we come better to know every part of the great heritage in the days to come.

"We have won the greater part of the fight to obtain and to retain these great public park properties for the benefit of the public. We are at the threshold of even more important a battle to save our resources of agriculture and industry against the selfishness of individuals."

'Cuss Word' Box Drain on Nickels

BRISTON, Conn., Aug. 6.—(AP.)—It costs money to be profane in the office of the city's department of public works.

A "cuss word" box is kept and offenders are told to drop in a nickle. The box is nearly full but no one knows what will be done with the money.

GIRL'S SUICIDE MOTIVE PUZZLE

Homicide detectives today were without a motive in the death of Stella Sowa, 23, of 102 South Eleventh street, who took poison in a laboratory in the rear of her home late yesterday.

The victim had been employed as a telephone operator by the Bell Telephone Company for the past five years, morgue officials said.

She went to her brother's laboratory, where chemicals and poisons are kept, and later was found on a couch in the home. She died several hours later at South Side Hospital. Members of the family could give no reason for her act.

10,000 to Attend Braddock Outing

Nearly 10,000 persons are expected to attend the annual Tri-Borough district community picnic, to be held at Kennywood Park tomorrow under the auspices of the Braddock Board of Trade. Participating communities will be Braddock, North Braddock and Swissvale. G. H. Trimble is general chairman.

Bull in China Shop? No, He's in Bathtub

FREEPORT, Me., Aug. 6.—(AP.)—Tony, a young bull, was not in a china shop but he had just as much fun.

Mrs. Julian Desmond found that of four pairs of bloomers and a cake of soap she had placed in a tub, Tony had eaten three pairs and the soap. The fourth pair reposed on Tony's horns.

POLICE RETURN MISSING GIRL

Police here had been asked to search for the girl by Meadville police, who expressed the belief she might have left with a carnival. Shortly after police aid was sought, she was found in the Howard street home. The girl said she had been befriended by the people and that she had called her parents Saturday night.

PINCHOT PLANS RELIEF PLEA

HARRISBURG, Aug. 6.—(AP.)—Governor Pinchot will go to Washington in a few days to confer with federal officials on the state's financial crisis in the relief problem in a last effort to prevent a special session of the legislature.

Returning to his desk today after a fishing trip at Block Island, R. I., the Governor said there is "nothing new" on the relief situation but he will make arrangements to go to Washington shortly.

President Roosevelt plans to return to the capital Friday and Harry L. Hopkins, federal relief administrator, who also has been away, is expected back next week.

Washington has served notice no more federal funds will be forthcoming after September 1 unless Pennsylvania shares a "reasonable" portion of the load.

As the state has no money for relief, liquor store profits having failed to materialize, reports of a special session of the legislature to deal with the situation have been current.

The Governor has said repeatedly he is doing everything in his power to avert a special session.

DALL DIVORCE PAINS CLERIC

NEW YORK, Aug. 6.—(AP.)—The Rt. Rev. William Hall Moreland, retired California Episcopal bishop, who occupied the pulpit yesterday at the Church of St. Mary the Virgin, was quoted by the Herald-Tribune as saying afterward that he considered the divorce of the Curtis B. Dalls "an unfortunate separation."

The bishop's sermon was on the subject of divorce, but he made no direct reference to the Dall case from the pulpit. He was quoted as saying afterward:

"It is unfair to blame parents for the mistakes of their children. The unfortunate separations in the Roosevelt family were no doubt a great affliction to the President and Mrs. Roosevelt, as they have been a grave disappointment to the church, and also, I think, to seriousminded people everywhere."

Dall Still Trustee Of Roosevelt Funds

STEEL 'REDS' PUSH STRIKE

A program that will include attempts to foment local strikes to be followed by a "mass" strike of steel workers had been adopted today by the biennial convention here of the Steel and Metal Workers' Industrial Union, a Communist-affiliated organization.

Resolutions adopted include a demand for an immediate increase of 35 per cent in steel workers' wages, a six-hour day and five-day week and abolition of wage differences between North and South.

The 200 delegates also voted in favor of a plan whereby employers would contribute 2 per cent of payroll totals to an unemployment fund — "to be administered by the union until enactment of unemployment insurance bill by the federal government."

Speakers attacked the New Deal, the Blue Eagle, federal expenditures for armament and the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers, affiliated with the American Federation of Labor.

STEELE NAMED TO MILK POST

Howard B. Steele, of Mt. Lebanon, secretary of the Dairymen's Co-operative Sales Association here, today was appointed by Gov. Gifford Pinchot to the third membership of the State Milk Control Board.

The appointment is subject to confirmation by the Senate, according to an International News dispatch from Harrisburg. Steele succeeds Howard C. Reynolds, of Factoryville, who resigned. His term will end April 30, 1935.

Mr. Steele was urged at the inauguration of the board to assume membership, but declined due to business. Steele has been associated with the dairy business throughout his life. He was born on a farm near Beatty, Pa., graduated in animal husbandry from Pennsylvania State College and continued his studies in the University of Pittsburgh School of Business Administration. He is regional consultant of the dairy section of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration.

A.F. of L. Blames Reds in Auto Secession

International News Service.

DETROIT, Aug. 6.—Secession of two large auto plant locals from the American Federation of Labor was blamed by the A. F. of L. today upon "radicals" who disapproved of the federation's unsympathetic attitude toward the San Francisco general strike.

The two unions, A. F. of L. locals in the Hudson plant at Detroit, and the Olds factory at Lansing, declared their separation from the federation Saturday. They announced they would form the nucleus of a new "vertical" union of automobile workers.

GREEN WANTS CWA RESTORED

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Aug. 6.—(AP.)—Declaring that the executives of all large cities in the country are viewing with alarm the unemployment situation next winter, William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, expressed himself today in favor of the restoration of the Civil Works Administration.

He said unemployment was still a major problem and he estimated 10,000,000 unemployment remain in the country.

Green, who is here to attend a 10-day conference of the executive council of A. F. of L., stated that the present meeting of the council he said, will draft many of the reports to be made at the annual meeting of the A. F. of L. in October. He declared that a member of matters of vital interest to labor would be taken up at the meeting.

U. S. Mediator Seeks Kohler Peace Plan

KOHLER, Wis., Aug. 6.—(AP.)—A resumption of efforts to effect a settlement of the Kohler Company strike, now in its fourth week, was planned today.

R. H. Cowdrill of Washington, who succeeded the Rev. J. W. Maguire of Kankakee, Ill., as mediator, said he would confer with company officials and workers.

CHICAGO YARDS FORGET STRIKE

Handlers and commission merchants' employes, who returned to work under terms of settlement arranged Saturday by Hugh S. Johnson, NRA administrator, faced a heavy rush of livestock. The 12-day strike involved 800 handlers and 400 commission merchants' employes.

The Union Stockyards and Transit Company was unusually peaceful as the men returned to their jobs. The district has been entirely cleared of the 500 non-union men whom the company hired in their places.

An agreement was reached when the company promised a 48-hour week to all regular employes, and a 40-hour week for so-called "extra men" each week that receipts reach 4,000 cars.

Federal Judge Philip L. Sullivan agreed to re-enter the case as an arbitrator. He made an award last May 31 in a similar controversy.

STRIKE CLOSES GLASS PLANT

BLAIRSVILLE, Aug. 6.—(AP.)—A strike of workers employed by the Blairsville plant of the Columbia Plate Glass Corporation was called today and the factory was shut down. Pickets were patrolling the property.

Leaders of the workers, who claim 285 of the 291 men employed by the factory are members of the Blairsville local of the Federated Flat Glass Workers' Union, said they are demanding recognition as the collective agent to deal with the company.

A meeting of the union employes last night was attended by representatives of glass workers' locals of Creighton, Tarentum, Arnold, and Ford City. Plans for similar recognition demands were discussed.

AFTER you receive the tobacco from the farmers you have to dry it just right and then store it away for ageing for over two years.

Then you take the different types of home grown and Turkish tobaccos and weld them together in such a way as to make a balanced blend.

The Chesterfield process of blending and cross-blending tobaccos is different from others, and we believe it helps to make a milder and better tasting cigarette.

DEATH TOLL 2, MANY HURT IN AUTO CRASHES

Week-end automobile accidents caused the death of two persons and resulted in serious injuries to others.

Julia Redlinsky, 55, of Imperial, was fatally injured when struck by a truck which left the road in front of her home to avoid a collision. Taken to Mercy Hospital, she died four hours later of shock and internal injuries.

Eugene Coleman, 22, of East Liverpool, O., was held in Carnegie Police Station as the driver of the truck, the morgue reported.

Crashing his car into a pole at 2508 East street yesterday, Fred J. Breckel, 57, of 404 Wabana street, North Side, suffered a fractured skull that resulted in his death in Allegheny General Hospital. A companion, Anna Brothers, 43, of 1225 Howard street, received a broken leg.

IN NEW AUTO

Breckel had purchased his auto only last week, police said.

Struck by an auto while crossing Washington boulevard, near Heths Run Bridge early today, Thomas Farrell, 27, of 6440 Penn avenue, was treated at Pittsburgh Hospital for a scalp laceration. Joseph Doherty, Spahr street, was driving the auto, police said.

Falling asleep at the wheel, according to Mt. Lebanon police, George McGee, of 1238 Vodelli street, drove his auto into a curb and then struck a tree and a pole. His wife, Ethel, 49, was taken to Homeopathic Hospital with a jaw injury and neck lacerations.

DRIVER FLEES

Hope Young, 26, of 32 Grant avenue, Bellevue, sustained a fractured skull when an auto in which she was riding was struck by another car at College avenue and Walnut street. The driver of the other auto, reported stolen a short time before, fled the scene of the crash.

Eight-year-old Agnes Johnston, of Saltsburg road, near Verona, was taken to Pittsburgh Hospital in a serious condition after being struck by a motorcycle near her home. She received a fractured skull.

HATFIELD VOTE LINKS NEW DEAL

CHARLESTON, W. Va., Aug. 6. (AP.)—West Virginia Republicans will tell Senator Henry D. Hatfield with ballots tomorrow whether they want him to keep hammering away at what he terms "the evils of the New Deal."

Hatfield, surgeon-politician, who has steadfastly opposed President Roosevelt's policies, is up for renomination in the party primary.

A victory for Hatfield is certain to make the New Deal the issue in the November election. Nine Democratic senatorial candidates have campaigned on a solid "We-are-Behind-Roosevelt" platform. Hatfield's principal opposition has been against the monetary and foreign policies of the administration.

The doctor-senator, who was Governor of West Virginia in 1913–17, has not made an active campaign, staying with his work in his two hospitals at Huntington and Logan. His three opponents are former Representative Benjamin L. Rosenbloom, W. I. Kilpatrick and Dr. George M. Fisher.

SILENCE SNAGS CLUES IN PLOT

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 6.—(AP.)—Only silence met the efforts today of police to trace the writers of a note which sought to collect $60,000 from five millionaires here on pain of injury to them and their families.

The demands for the money were made last week on E. L. Doheny, oil magnate; William Gettle, oil millionaire who was kidnaped last May but freed and his abductors captured before ransom could be collected; Alexander Pantages, theatrical impressario; Jack J. Doyle, oil and sports promoter, and Orra Monnette, banker.

Not quite sure whether the note was a joke or a serious threat, police complied with its instructions and answered the writers through the want ad columns of a newspaper. No answer came.

NEWS BEHIND THE NEWS :-: By PAUL MALLON

Power of Adolf Hitler Wanes, But He's Still Popular

WASHINGTON, Aug. 6.—The first thing Hitler did after von Hindenburg died was to make the army swear obedience to him. Our officials exchanged knowing glances when they read that.

Mr. Mallon.

It has been an open secret in diplomatic circles for a long time that a strong crowd of army generals was and still is secretly opposed to Hitler. These generals worshipped von Hindenburg, who kept them in the Nazi line. Many of them were associates and friends of Gen. von Schleicher, who now lies murdered by Nazi bullets.

It is easy to suspect they had some mental reservations when Hitler extracted the personal oath from them.

REVOLUTION

These generals are the only hope of the Hitler opposition. Hitler could have been legally removed by von Hindenburg, but now there is no one to remove him. The only way he can be trapped is by revolt, and the only ones who could conduct a first class revolution against him are the generals and their army.

The elections are, of course, farces. You can imagine how many Hitler opponents will dare to risk their necks by going to the polls. Also, the vote-counting is done by the Nazis.

How long it will take the army to get a revolution started is a matter for conjecture. Hitler's power is beginning to wane. Continuous economic hardships of the people, the loss of domestic prestige by his bloody murder purge and foreign isolation of Germany are weakening his popularity. Yet there is no question here but that he still maintains a strong hold on a large mass of people.

Our officials privately believe he will continue to hold on until conditions become worse or a new leader arises.

WARNING

The AAA is about to crack down on a few outstanding violators of the AAA marketing agreements. They expect to do it by legal action and not by words as other crackers-down have done.

Some actions already are in the process of preparations. Before the end of the summer it is proposed to hale certain large companies into the courts.

The AAAers appear to have no fear about the legality of their program or its constitutionality else they would avoid the courts.

DODGING

The way the NRA has been dodging court tests is a subject of snickering comment wherever lawyers gather. The Greif cause in Baltimore brought that out not long ago. The judge became angry because government lawyers argued technical questions of jurisdiction to keep the case from going to trial.

That is probably smart strategy. In that case, the judge restrained local NRA authorities from further steps against the manufacturer, but that did not stop NRA officials in Washington. They immediately forbade the code authority to sell any more Blue Eagle labels to the company.

The company thumbed its nose by saying it had enough labels to last through September. There you are.

ANNA ANTONIO AGAIN NEARS DEATH CHAIR

Universal Service.

OSSINING, N. Y., Aug. 6.—This may be the last Monday for Mrs. Anna Antonio.

If Justice O. Byron Brewster, in Elizabethtown, N. Y., does not grant her a new trial today, one if Gov. Lehman does not snatch her from the death chair with a last hour reprieve, the 29-year-old mother will walk the "last mile" for the murder of her husband before midnight Thursday.

Thursday is the seventh birthday of her daughter, Marie.

But the woman who three times was reprieved after she had been garbed in the death robe and her head had been shaved today was more hopeful than she has been at any time since she came to the death house.

NERVES STEADY

The fact that a Catholic priest has entered the case with new evidence seems of tremendous significance to the haggard, weary-eyed woman. She said:

"Who wouldn't be excited in the position I am in? But my mind is perfectly clear. My nerves are not unstrung."

The new trial was asked after it was discovered the man who informed her that Salvatore, her husband, had been slain was the Rt. Rev. William A. Brown, who administered the last rites.

A part of Mrs. Antonio's contentment is due to the fact that she has finished the stint she set for herself in the death house—the making of enough clothes to dress her three children for a year.

CLOTHES FOR CHILDREN

For Marie and for Phyllis, 9, there are four dresses each. And for Frank, 3, there are three suits made of material donated by Warden Lawes. The mother said:

"I am all finished sewing. For a year the children will not need clothes. That makes me happy."

If Mrs. Antonio does not die, there is little chance that the pair who were convicted with her as her hired assassins will escape death.

GUARDS NAME FROM EX-WIFE

Universal Service.

SANTA BARBARA, Cal., Aug. 6.—Jesse Livermore, wealthy New York broker once dubbed "The Boy Plunger of Wall Street," has taken unique steps to deny his former wife, Mrs. Dorothea A. Longcope, the use of the Livermore name for the next year.

In behalf of Livermore, representatives of the law firm of Shaw & Ryan appeared before Judge A. B. Bigler and obtained a modification of the interlocutory decree of divorce he granted Mrs. Longcope from J. Walter Longcope, onetime spectacular prohibition agent, ten days ago.

The modification provided that by court order, Mrs. Longcope is restrained from using the name of Livermore until the decree becomes final, next July 25.

When and if she does use the name, according to Judge Bigler's order she must designate herself not as "Mrs. Jesse Livermore," but as "Mrs. Dorothea Livermore."

CANDY TAKES HER 3RD TEETH

BEAVERTON, Ont., Aug. 6.—(AP.)—A fondness for candy has proved costly to Mrs. Mary Ann Elliott, 76-year-old Beaverton woman who reported a remarkable rejuvenation a few months ago.

Last May Mrs. Elliott's friends said her hair suddenly began to darken and grow; her eyesight, which had nearly gone, improved; and a third set of teeth appeared.

Mrs. Elliott's sight is still improving, she said, but she lost the front teeth of her third set. They were somewhat soft and broke off when she bit a piece of hard candy. But Mrs. Elliott says she can eat "anything."

Pittsburgh Bishop Unites Coast Pair

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 6.—(AP.)—At an elaborate ceremony Miss Ljuba Pashkovsky, daughter of Bishop Theophilus, head of the Russian church in the United States and Canada, was married to Alex A. Gnesdeloff, son of a wealthy merchant from Orenberg, Russia.

HALT NUMBERS CASES TO GET OWNER

Hearings for seven men seized in a lottery raid at 1606 Center avenue Saturday were continued until tomorrow by Magistrate John B. Kearney in Center Avenue Police Court today when Police Inspector John Vincent requested a delay pending arrest of the owner of the alleged numbers lottery.

Seeking the postponement, Inspector Vincent said:

'I will not let any of these seven men take the 'rap' for the rightful owner. If he does not show up by tomorrow I will get a warrant and bring him in."

Vincent did not discuss the identity of the "rightful owner."

Inspector Vincent and Lieut. Patrick Dixon led the raid in which seven adding machines, quantites of numbers books and slips and other records were seized.

William Murray, Negro, 2720½ Wylie avenue, was fined $10 and five visitors were discharged yesterday in connection with a raid at 2720½ Wylie avenue, where numbers slips were reported seized.

Joe Parish, 35, Negro, was fined $5 after police told of seizing cards, chips and money at 10½ Elm street. Eighteen visitors were discharged.

Arrested while writing numbers at Liberty and Oliver avenues, Thomas McGinnis, 22, of 115 Arlington avenue, attempted to bribe two policemen with $30 if they would release him, it was testified at his hearing in Central Police Court. He was fined $50.

$75,000 IN DOPE SEIZED; 2 HELD

Universal Service.

NEW YORK, Aug. 6.—Two young men, accused as affluent wholesalers of an international narcotic ring, with headquarters in Paris, were seized by federal agents yesterday along with a dope cache valued between $75,000 and $100,000.

Work of several of Igoe's agents in obtaining a secret cable password necessary to gain the confidence of the ring led to the arrests.

3 WIN AWARDS AT CAMP

Three Pittsburgh district youths will be awarded medals for merit demonstrated during the 1934 Citizens' Military Training Camp at Fort George G. Meade, Md.

They are Robert A. Engelhardt, 514 Hayes avenue, and Willis J. Evans, Wall avenue extension, Pitcairn, and D. W. Van Arsdall, 333 Twelfth street, New Brghton.

John C. Jeffries, of 920 Jacksonia street, was named alternate for a scholarship from the University of Baltimore.

Man-Eating Shark Attacks Boy in River

SAVANNAH, Ga., Aug. 6.—(AP.)—The first man-eating shark to be reported at Thunderbolt, on the Wilmington River near here, severely lacerated the right leg of William M. Aimar, Jr., 11, of Beaufort, S. C., but was frightened away by the boy's struggles to escape.

The boy was swimming near the dock of a shrimp canning plant yesterday when he felt the shark bite his leg. He thrashed the water and cried for aid.

Unconscious Cripple Found Near Tracks

2 Meetings Honor Revolution's Heroes

Revolutionary War heroes were honored at two large meetings held yesterday by the Fort Cherry Association, Pennsylvania Society of National Shrines of the American Revolution. Meetings were held at Mt. Prospect, Washington County, and Fort Cherry, with A. ... White, of Hickory, and Dr. D. ... Bennett, of Bridgeville, as speakers. E. M. Golden, of Dormont, state president, spoke at both meetings.

New Art Course At Carnegie Tech

A new course in industrial design will be added at Carnegie Institute of Technology next fall, officials announced today. It will be a part of the curriculum of the department of painting and design. Aiding in the teaching of the course will be Donald R. Dehner, an industrial engineer.

'CANAL DAY' STRESSES NEED FOR CHANNEL

Future of District Depends Upon Waterways

Proposed Canal Lake Erie.

After nearly 50 years of discussion, in which four routes have been proposed and studied, United States Army engineers have recommended the construction of the Beaver-Mahoning route.

This route would lead from the mouth of the Beaver River where it empties into the Ohio, northward through Niles and Youngstown to the shores of Lake Erie.

The cost would range around $128,000,000.

Funds would be provided from Public Works Administration sources, if the federal government can be induced to act at this time on the recommendations of its Army engineers, who have charge of inland waterways development by authority of Congress.

At a recent meeting in Youngstown, O., the Chamber of Commerce gathered friends of waterways development together and set out to get 200,000 signatures to petitions asking the federal government to act without delay on this badly-needed project, which would provide work for thousands and give Pittsburgh direct access to lake ports and to the sea by way of the New York Barge Canal.

In this district the project has been urged for many years by the Lake Erie and Ohio River Canal Board, of which Alexander Dann is chairman.

Army engineers have set aside a short period of time in which opponents of the recommended route may protest. The date expires August 19.

A public hearing on the proposed route may be held in Washington early in September.

The economic future of the Pittsburgh district depends upon development of waterways. Access to lake ports would be a vital bulwark. Many industrialists declare that such a canal is absolutely necessary to save Pittsburgh in the competitive struggle with other districts.

A national project, rather than a local one, the importance of the Lake Erie-Ohio River Canal has been made a part of the national inland waterways system which is being advocated by the Hearst newspapers, including the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

If you are in favor of the government's building the Lake Erie canal now, sign the accompanying petition and send it to this newspaper for transmission to the proper authorities at Washington.

Socialists to Hear Chairman of Jobless

Robert Lieberman, county chairman of the Unemployed Citizens League, will address a meeting of the Socialist Party of Allegheny County at Grandview Park, Mt. Washington, tomorrow night. His topic will be "Our Present Economic Chaos."

Dravosburg Man Victim of Stabbing

Lawrence Taylor, 27, of Curry's Hollow, Dravosburg, was recovering today from a stab wound in the back suffered late Saturday when he was attacked from the rear by an unknown assailant near his home.

Help Build Canal! Fill Petition!

No better use of federal money could be found at this time than for improvement of our inland waterways—not only for employment, but for permanent security of industrial centers which are inland ports.

Pittsburgh needs the building of the proposed Lake Erie-Ohio River Canal to get access to lake ports and to the sea. Government engineers finally have approved the Beaver-Mahoning route and recommended that federal funds be used for its construction. The next step is up to Chairman Ickes, of the Public Works Administration.

Are you in favor of building the canal to Lake Erie? If you are, help get the accompanying petition signed and see that it is mailed at once to this newspaper.

WATERWAYS EDITOR, Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph:

We favor immediate construction of the ship canal from the Pittsburgh district to Lake Erie, along the Beaver-Mahoning route recommended by United States Army engineers.

SCOUTS ENLIST CANAL BACKERS

NEW CASTLE, Aug. 6.—(AP.)—Corps of Boy Scouts started out today on a drive for 25,000 signatures before nightfall to a petition urging that President Roosevelt include the proposed Mahoning-Shenango River Canal in the PWA program now being formulated.

As a part of the drive, Mayor Charles B. Mayme designated today as "Canal Day" in New Castle. Similar petitions are being circulated in other parts of Lawrence County, and throughout sections of Pennsylvania and Ohio which would be served by the canal.

'CURES' FLOOD NED SPARKS

HOLLYWOOD, Aug. 6.—(AP.)—Ned Sparks, who has done pretty well in the movies partly due to the alum-eating appearance he gives, has quit counting the stomach cure suggestions he has been receiving.

About 9,000 Sparks fans, reading that his professionally sour face was due to a stomach condition, said today:

Jury in 'Triangle' Slaying Dismissed

DETROIT, Aug. 6.—(AP.)—The jury trying Alvin Meyer, 48, former Milwaukee and Toledo department store executive, on a charge of slaying Norman Beerbohm, 29-year-old advertising executive, last May 19, was dismissed yesterday after having announced it was unable to reach a verdict.

Meyer was charged with having stabbed Beerbohm to death on a downtown parking lot when he found the latter with Mrs. Elda Meyer, 28, his estranged wife.

500 Autos Burned In Buffalo Blaze

BUFFALO, N. Y., Aug. 6.—(INS.)—Five hundred new automobiles scheduled for delivery to New York City dealers were destroyed in a half-million-dollar blaze which swept the Nicholson-Universal Steamship Company warehouse on the South Buffalo waterfront early today.

The flames also enveloped a wooden steamer moored alongside the warehouse and destroyed an adjacent power transformer station.

FIANCEE SEES MAN END LIFE

GREENSBURG, Pa., Aug. 6.—(AP.)—Her fiance's suicide has ended the marriage plans of Betty Gargeon, of Harrison City. John Shuka, 22, drove her home last night and, as they sat in the car, shot himself to death.

Shuska's body pinned the girl to the side of the car. A passerby climbed in. He drove to a hospital with the body between him and the girl.

Two Rescued From Burning Motorboat

Burned when their motorboat exploded and tossed them into the Youghiogheny River near the Fifth Avenue Bridge, McKeesport, yesterday, two men were rescued by Louie Reason, 40, who lives on a nearby houseboat. Edward Tessaro, 23, of Wyano, and Tony Gordon, 29, of Brentwood, were treated at McKeesport Hospital for burns suffered in the accident.

Heart Attack Kills Bloomfield Dentist

Dr. Sheridan P. Myers, 68, a dentist, was found dead in a chair in his office at 4912 Liberty avenue yesterday, the morgue reported. Heart trouble was given as the cause of death. Dr. Myers located in the Bloomfield section about 15 years ago, coming here from McKeesport.

NOVICE ENTERS RING TO FIGHT BULL, DIES

MADRID, Aug. 6.—(AP.)—The bullfighter's celebrated adage, "There are only two gateways from the arena, one to glory and one to the tomb," was borne out tragically at Madrid's Plaza Novillada yesterday, where a bull gored and mortally wounded Pablo Sanchez, 20, a spectator.

Sanchez, a muleta in his hand, sprang from the stands into the ring seeking to attract the interest of the crowd. The bull tore open the youth's chest before professional attendants could intervene.

Sanchez was an amateur seeking bullring fame.

Stampede of Bulls Panics Spectators

CARDOBA, Spain, Aug. 6.—(AP.)—More than 50 persons were hurt yesterday, some seriously, in a stampede of fighting bulls.

A large crowd watched the animals charging into each other in a field. The beasts, apparently excited by shouts, suddenly turned on the spectators. The injured were trampled, none being gored.

Stork's Amnesty To Hinge on Sex

ROME, Aug. 6.—(INS.)—Birth of a child to Crown Prince Humberto and Crown Princess Maria Jose, expected about September 10, will be celebrated by a general amnesty for lesser criminal and political prisoners, it was learned today, but the number to be freed will depend on the sex of the baby.

If the child is a boy, the number of prisoners freed will probably run into the hundreds, but if it is a girl, the number will be far smaller.

Male Models Nude, So Girls Ban Men

PARIS, Aug. 6.—(INS.)—Refusal of girl students to share their sculpture classes with men created a stir today at the famous Beaux Arts School when the authorities, in an effort to economize, started "co-educational" classes. The girls refused to have undraped men as models with men students in the class.

A BECOMING FRILL ON A SIMPLE FROCK

Pattern 1937

Sun-Telegraph 15c Pattern

This model is as obviously designed for a tub fabric as Eve was designed for Adam.

It is simply perfect for a printed lawn or batiste or linen. It has just the right crisp, perky look and it only takes a little time to make.

One doesn't want to put too much time on the making of an inexpensive wash material. But when everything is said and done, the woman who makes up this design will have a mighty smart little frock.

She will wear it a lot to different places and always with a great deal of pleasure—which is all anyone can ask of it.

Pattern 1937 is available in sizes 14, 16, 18, 20, 32, 34, 36, 38, 40 and 42. Size 16 takes 3½ yards 36-inch fabric. Illustrated step-by-step sewing instructions included.

Send 15 CENTS in coins or stamps (coins preferred) for this pattern. Write plainly name, address and style number. BE SURE TO STATE SIZE.

And while you are writing, why not include an order for a fascinating book, crammed from cover to cover with stunning illustrations and captivating descriptions of new fashions, fabrics and other things that make a woman chic . . . . THE SUMMER ISSUE OF THE PATTERN BOOK. PRICE 15 CENTS. BOOK AND PATTERN TOGETHER, 25 CENTS.

HITLER PLEADS FOR FREEDOM OF REICH

COLD RAIN FALLS

Outside, a cold rain fell. The crowd paid no attention to it. Although the speech was not delivered until noon, great masses of persons swarmed about the chancellery where Hitler was putting the final touches on his speech during the morning. Many of those waiting were women. They formed a speaking chorus, shouting at regular intervals:

"Eins, zwei, drei, vier, fuenf, sechs, zehn, wir woolen unsren kanzler sehen!" which means: "One, two, three, four, five,, six, 10. We want to see our Chancellor!"

The Chancellor redeatedly responded to the women's calls by showing himself silently at a window and waving back a Nazi salute.

As early as daybreak, Hitler's black-uniformed special guards, the Schutz Staffel, were concentrated in the immediate vicinity of the Kroll Opera House and along the Wilhelmstrasse. They were supplemented by strong police cordons to keep the passage clear for the automobiles of Hitler and his cabinet.

STREETS ROPED OFF

All along their course, the side streets were roped off to permit a speedy passage.

The opera house was swathed in black crepe and profusely garlanded with evergreens inside. From the black rostrum, lined with laurel trees and white lilies, a marble bust of the dead von Hindenburg looked out upon the throng. Hitler's words were carried to the masses of humanity outside in the Koenigspanatz by numbers of loud speakers.

The air inside the great auditorium was heavy with the odor of the lilies. The scene was black with the signs of mourning. Even the chandeliers and the carpets were draped in black. The members of the Reichstag wore uniforms with black armbands. The only relieving notes were the white lilies, the evergreens and the white bust of the dead field marshal.

The memorial services began with the Coriolan overture by the Philharmonic Orchestra.

The authorities had seen to it that there should be no interruptions, for the precautions to preserve order were on an unprecedented scale. Guards mounted on horseback and motor trucks were everywhere in addition to the regular police and the Schutz Staffel. No traffic was permitted to move in the vicinity.

BOULEVARD QUIZ REPORT DUE

An auditors report, which is expected to charge overpayments on contracts and other irregularities in the construction of the Ohio River boulevard, will be presented to the County Commissioners at their meeting tomorrow.

The report, completed by Main and Company, is expected to show that overpayments were made on contracts; that money allocated for road work was used for bridge construction and that reports of the engineers on the job were scrapped and ignored by country officials.

The report is expected to state that when engineers in charge of the work refused to approve certain completed projects, approval was given by higher officials in the Babcock - Armstrong administration.

It is understood that the report will uncover several instances where the official authorization of payments to construction companies, was far in excess of the contract terms.

Stone Nazi Flag In New Orleans

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 6.—(AP.)—Stoning of the German consulate here by three men who were assertedly displeased because a swastika flag was flown from the building, has been officially reported to the German embassy in Washington.

Dr. Ernst Wendler, German consul here, would say only that the vandals "must have had political reasons" for the act. He said he had reported it to the embassy.

Duce Pilots Plane To Naval Maneuvers

Germany Must Renounce 'False Gods' to Preserve World Peace, Says R. W. Child

By RICHARD WASHBURN CHILD

Noted Author and Former United States Ambassador to Italy.

THE PRESIDENT will return to find that more than ever Germany holds the center of the stage. Doesn't the State Department know it?

Mr. Child

War or peace—for a tremendous sector of civilization—may depend upon her!

Civilization by good order or dissolution by the jelly of social chaos may be determined by the destiny of the German people!

Germany, bankrupt, beset, bereft of the wisdom of Hindenburg, with a population of 63 million people who want work, who probably wish to give and get a square and human deal, even their enemies say, have been the human playthings of leaders who made excesses in war and then of leaders who, in desperate circumstances, have made even greater unwise excesses of peace.

NO ONE but a fool will pin upon the new generation of Germany the tag of any just hate. No one will blame the Germans for loving Germany. No one but idiots assert that things can go on in the center of the civilized world as they have been going in Germany without inevitable and certain jolts to the whole machinery of civilization.

Twenty years after the war began, when we thought Germany was a menace to civilization, she was possibly less of a menace to civilization than she may become tomorrow.

Desperation may drive her to violence of war-crazy suicide!

Desperation may drive her to wild ideas of self subsistence under a flabby Communist state—crazy suicide!

WHATEVER the cause of her desperation—perhaps the excesses and lopsided justice and intoxicated dreams of the Versailles treaty—that desperation is now just as threatening to Europe and world peace and world order as if it had been a desperation invented, contrived and effected by the devil.

Whatever is done to or for Germany now will almost surely require the combined statesmenship of Europe to determine.

We are far away, and the President knows that even our advice is principally valuable because of our detachment. Statesmanship of Europe—except for one or two big thinking men—is at low ebb. The tide has gone down and only little crabs of statescraft and diplomacy fiddle on the beach.

"BUT IF there were a statesman," they are saying in Europe, "What would he do? How would he lead?"

He could suggest an invasion of Germany and an extermination by massacre of all Germans including babies.

He could suggest an invasion of Germany, to take away whatever fighting power Germany is lamely developing, or to take out of the dead white corpse of Germany's resources still more that the Germans need to survive.

But he would know that people of Europe would not support that move. He would know that even armies might revolt when mobilized and come back like boomerangs.

He would know that while the expensive invasion and "sanctions" were supported all well and good, but that when they ceased well—there would be the same old Germany!

A LEADER of thought in Europe, as our President can quietly point out, would toss into the waste basket all the cursing and imprecations against the leaders who took Germany to hell in war and may take her to hell in peace.

Sixty-three millions people who are nationally industrious and are sick of war have to live. You can either kill them all or drive them to desperate violence or to desperate decay which might spread as a rotten apple infects its neighbors with rot.

Probably a big statesman in Europe would be left with the conclusion that a European conference about "what to do with Germany?" would decide that only one thing is left to do—CO-OPERATION TO OFFER GERMANY REHABILITATION ON THE CONDITION THAT SHE WOULD IN ACTS—NOT IN WORDS—DUMP ALL THOSE LEADERS WHO WILL NOT RENOUNCE VIOLENCE, INTRIGUE, BLOOD AND THE ROT OF IDLE UTOPIAN EXPERIMENTS.

If not, the European leaders [illegible] co-operation to solve the biggest question in the civilized world might well say:

"GOD HELP HER! AND PERHAPS GOD HELP US ALL!"

TORCHES LIGHT FUNERAL ROUTE

NEUDECK, Germany, Aug. 6.—(AP.)—Through a lane of flaming torches 60 miles long, the body of Paul Von Hindenburg will be taken tonight to his grave.

At dusk a squadron of seven airplanes, piloted by East Prussian aviators, will scatter red roses over the Neudeck estate.

Brief memorial exercises will be held in the manor house. Then the coffin bearing the body of Germany's hero will be placed on a gun carriage for the trip to Tannenburg, scene of one of his greatest military triumphs.

Uniformed men will line the roadside, torches in hand, in honor of the old soldier. Nazi storm troops, Schutz Staffel members and Hitler youth will join the regular army in the tribute as the caisson rumbles along.

At Tannenberg, site of Germany's victory over Russia in 1914, the body will be placed in the marshal's tower of the national memorial, a tower now known as "Von Hindenburg Tower."

HITLER YIELDS ON FOREIGN POLICY

International News Service.

LONDON, Aug. 6.—Adolf Hitler disavows two major tents of Nazi foreign policy and gives assurance that Germany will never make war, in his first interview since assuming absolute rule which was published today in the Daily Mail a few hours before his Reichstag speech.

Hitler said that all Germany asked was "that her present boundaries be maintained." (Polish Corridor revision was an important Nazi tenet.) He also said that "anschluss," (union with Austria) was "impossible at present because the opposition to it from the rest of Europe would be too great."

As for war, he said to Ward Price, London journalist:

"If it rests with Germany war will not come. To us war would offer no prizes; 1918 was a lesson and a warning.

"We ask only that our present frontiers shall be maintained. Believe me, we shall never fight again except in self defense.

"This country has a more profound impression than any other of the evils which war causes. Ninety-five per cent of the members of the national administration have had personal experience of its horrors. They know that it is not a romantic adventure, but a ghastly catastrophe.

"I have repeatedly assured the French that when the Saar question is settled no further territorial differences will exist between us, while on the eastern frontier I have proved our peaceful intentions by making a pact with Poland.

"It is sad indeed that our Marshall Hindenburg should have died. Had he lived a few years longer, I believe that he would have found a way to make Germany's sincere desire for peace still more plainly manifest to the world."

HITLER'S POWER WANING, KNICKERBOCKER DECLARES

By H. R. KNICKERBOCKER

International News Service.

BERLIN, Aug. 6.—Comparatively scanty crowds greeted Adolf Hitler on the streets of Berlin today as the dictator passed in his super-powered car on the way to the Kroll Opera House, Reichstag meeting place, to eulogize President Hindenburg and on the way back to the Chancellor's palace.

It was Hitler's first public appearance since he became the German Caesar. It was the first chance Germany had to show its reactions to his assumption of all powers.

There were tens of thousands in the streets today, but they were few in comparison to the hundreds of thousands who used frantically to acclaim a new leader.

PUBLIC'S REACTION

This is the difference between Hitler fresh to power and Hitler after 18 months of power. This fact, plus the character of the policing to safeguard Hitler, is a more important political fact than anything Hitler said in his funeral oration.

The barometer of public enthusiasm is definitely down. Police precautions today were such as have not been taken in this city since the last visit of the French statesmen, Briand and Laval, when Republican Germany mobilized to protect their lives like the Russian Czar was protected when he came to Berlin under Kaiser Wilhelm.

On the Unter Den Linden guards kept the public 30 feet away from the lane down which Hitler's car proceeded at high speed to flash through the central arch of the Brandenburger gate, which, in the olds days, was reserved for the Kaiser.

It is apparent today that the whip of propaganda has lost its stimulus for the Germman public. Yet there is not the faintest chance that the "plebiscite" on August 19 will fail to give Hitler an overwhelming votes.

READY TO VOTE

The plebiscite is really only comparable to the swearing in of the army. Just as the army was lined up to take the oath to Hitler on command of the Reichswehr minister, just so the German people will be lined up to say "yes" to an accomplished fact.

PAPEN MEETS AUSTRIAN COUNT

BERLIN, Aug. 6.—(AP.)—A rumor was curculated early today that Vice Chancellor Franz von Papen met in conference Sunday with the Austrian Count George von Thurn, brother-in-law of Prince Ernst von Starhemberg, head of the Austrian Heimwehr.

The rumor, which could not be confirmed, was that Thurn had departed after the conference for Steenockerzeel, accompanied by Count Mensdorf-Pouilly, former Austrian ambassador to London.

What effect this conference, if it was held, might have in Vienna's still outstanding acceptance of von Papen as special German envoy remained a matter of speculation.

WASH OUT 15 MILES OF KIDNEY TUBES

Win Back Pep . . . Vigor . . . Vitality

Medical authorities agree that your kidneys contain 15 MILES of tiny tubes or filters which help to purify the blood and keep you healthy.

If you have trouble with too frequent bladder passages with scanty amount causing burning and discomfort, the 15 MILES of kidney tubes need washing out. This danger signal may be the beginning of nagging backache, leg pains, loss of pep and vitality, getting up nights, lumbago, swollen feet and ankles, rheumatic pains and dizziness.

If kidneys don't empty 3 pints every day and get rid of 4 pounds of waste matter, your body will take up these poisons causing serious trouble. It may knock you out and lay you up for many months. Don't wait. Ask your druggist for DOAN'S PILLS . . . a doctor's prescription . . . which has been used successfully by millions of kidney sufferers for over 40 years. They give quick relief and will help to wash out the 15 MILES of kidney tubes.

But don't take chances with strong drugs or so-called "kidney cures" that claim to fix you up in 15 minutes, for they may seriously injure and irritate delicate tissues. Insist on DOAN'S PILLS . . . the old reliable relief that contain no "dope" or habit-forming drugs. Be sure you get DOAN'S PILLS at your druggist. © 1934, Foster-Milburn Co.

Snub by Little Michael Makes Lupescu Flee

By SEYMOUR BERKSON

Universal Service.

PARIS, Aug. 6.—Word of a dramatic scene between young Prince Michael of Rumania and Mme. Magda Lupescu, Italian-haired favorite of King Carol, reached the Rumanian colony here today.

Before the prince's recent departure for Venice to visit his mother, Princess Helene, who lives in exile there, Mme Lupescu bought the latest and most expensive camera she could find and presented it as a gift to Michael, whom she has been seeking, it was said, in court circles, to treat as her own son.

Michael, who is 12 years old and has remained devoted to his mother despite her divorce from Carol and virtual banishment from Rumania, merely clicked his heels politely, thanked La Lupescu in the most formal tones, and added with boyish frankness:

"I hope to bring back some good pictures of mother."

Mme Lupescu broke into tears and left the room immediately. She has been striving ever since her return to Rumania after Carol was crowned king to win the affection of the heir to the throne.

Treated Boy Mean, Now She Wants Him Back

Grew BORED at his constant attentions, and became cold . . . He went with her FOUR YEARS, and was faithful and said he would do anything for her . . . And that was too much for her . . . she evidently wanted a more PLAYFUL suitor. One who would keep her guessing . . .

And that is what he is doing now . . . And she is all wrought up over it . . . does he still LOVE her? Can she get him back?

Dear Miss Brunot:

I have been going with a certain young man for four years. He was in love with me, but I don't know whether he still is, or not. We go in a crowd. We are all very friendly and lively and get along swell. They are mostly my boy friend's cousins.

Miss Brunot

I liked him very much. He has always been lovely with me, and treated me royally. He has taken me everywhere and has often told me he would do anything at all for me. I suppose I became bored with him. Anyway I started treating him coldly. He still took me about, but I never engaged myself to him.

VISITS STOP

About three months ago he stopped seeing me. He still treats me nicely, but never takes me out any more . . . Now, I like him more and more every time I see him . . . I believe it is love after all. My problem is, how can I get him back? I miss him so much. It's driving me crazy.

He is 20, and I am 19. Do you think I love him, or is it just a crush?

I go a great deal with his sister and often when at work, he is there. His cousins suggest I give a party for him. But I am in doubt. Is this love, or is it a habit?

Worried.

We can fancy love exists when it is but a habit, sister . . . When people are around all the time we do get used to them, and even take them too much for granted . . . And one must admit it is not a complimentary position for the person so treated . . . I have no doubt this boy friend's pride has gotten the better of him . . . His cousins may have guyed him, telling him you were indifferent . . . This hurt, I am sure . . .

Whether you really are in love, I cannot say. It may be with you a case of wanting what you had, back again . . . That may be all . . . However, why not give the party . . . He will come, and if he wants to be your best fellow again, this certainly will give him the opportunity. If he does not, then it will be all over, and you will have to swallow hard . . . and quit.

WANTS BOY BACK

Convicted her boy friend on circumstantial evidence, and now she wishes she hadn't done it . . . Believed what a notorious fibber told her, and wrote a saucy note, and now she longs to have that note safe within the fold, and the boy with it . . . A girl that goes by fits and starts, or at least that is the way her heart works, is a Patient Waiter . . . And I wonder if things will come her way? I doubt it . . .

Dear Miss Brunot:

I started to a different school last September. About a week later one of the class fellows called up and gave his name and asked me for a date. As I hadn't noticed him at school, I said I would have to see about it. The next day I had my best friend point him out to me, and after that he and I became good friends. Then all of a sudden I grew tired of him, even began hating him, and he and I were quits.

Then I longed for him again, and gave a party and asked one of my boy friends to bring him to it. The boy friend said he almost had to get on his knees to get him to come. Well, we danced together and had grand fun, and he took my ring and we were going swimmingly, when the next day another boy, who is notorious for not telling the truth, told me the fellow said he had not had a good time.

HE STAYS AWAY

This angered me, and I wrote my boy friend a note, and told him exactly what I thought. And insisted he give me back the ring. He sent the ring to me, but has stayed away himself. How can I get him back, Miss Brunot? I saw him the other day, and he did not speak. But he was in a car and going fast, and he may not have seen me.

I want him more than anything else in the world. What can I do?

A PATIENT WAITER.

At last you are seeing the light of day, since you gave this fellow the benefit of the doubt, when he passed in the car and didn't speak. You sign yourself Patient Waiter. But are you that?

Instead you seem to me to be a person who not only jumps to a quick conclusion, but who usually acts immediately upon it. Why, under the sun, if you knew the boy who told you your boy friend was bored, was a notorious fabricator, did you believe what he said and write your boy friend about it? Not very sensible was it, sister?

TACT NEEDED

The very fact that the young man whom you asked to bring your boy friend to your party, had to get on his knees, almost, to bring him, should have forewarned you to be tactful . . . No young man who has any backbone is going to be played with as a cat plays with a mouse. . . . Remember that.

No doubt you are an attractive girl, and make a good impression when met. But beware that this quality has not SPOILED your chances for much future happiness . . . Learn, sister, before it is past remedy . . . the time will come when years take away some of your charm, and then unless you have developed other good qualities, you won't be very popular.

WOMEN REAL SUPPORT OF CLEAN FILMS, FAY KING POINTS OUT

WOMEN SELDOM SINK "TO" — BUT USUALLY "FROM"
BUT WHILE WOMEN LAUGH AND SEEM TO APPROVE THEY INSTINCTIVELY RESENT COARSENESS AND BILK
FAY KING

By FAY KING.

Nothing can be real lasting success unless women approve and are enthusiastic.

Books that interest men more than women have never topped the "best seller" list.

The falling off in theater patronage is due to the fact that women do not really care for plays and movies that have ribald stag themes.

Out of curiosity women may see a rough show, or read a rough book, but at heart they can never really approve. For women at heart are above such.

There is an instinct to improve, to rise above the coarse and degrading, common to all women, even those unfortunate ones whom circumstances have relegated to zones beneath their innate aspirations.

Nothing vulgar and offensive ever pleased any woman really, though she may not voice her disapproval.

Contract Bridge :: HOW TO PLAY and HOW TO WIN

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

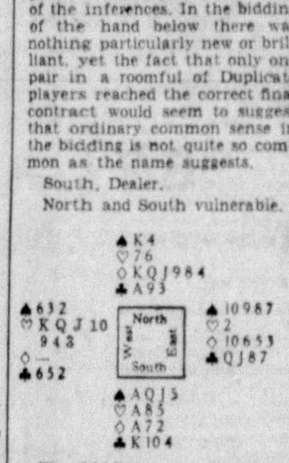
Uncommon Common Sense

Just as it is easier to make a ham of Hamlet than of lesser lights in the glamorous world or drama, so it is easier to make a ham of oneself in trying to make brilliant and original bids than in merely bidding logically and accurately. In fact, one might go a step further and say that the bids that are actually most brilliant and original, comparatively speaking, are simply those which are most logical and accurate. Those who pant for the higher life in bidding are likely to find themselves in the position of the budding novelist who sent his work to a great critic and received it back with the comment that there was a great deal in it that was new and a great deal that was true, but the parts that were new were not true and vice versa. In Brdige, as in literature, it is best to stick to the truth and let the originality depend on the depth and subtlety of the inferences. In the bidding of the hand below there was nothing particularly new or brilliant, yet the fact that only one pair in a roomful of Duplicate players reached the correct final contract would seem to suggest that ordinary common sense in the bidding is not quite so common as the name suggests.

Mrs. Culbertson

South, Dealer.

North and South vulnerable.



The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	2 ♡ (1)	3 ◇ (2)	Pass
3 ♡ (3)	4 ♡ (4)	6 ◇ (5)	Pass
7 ◇ (6)	Pass	Pass	Pass

1—The Overcall with six certain heart tricks is fully justified. At worst, West could be defeated only 2 tricks for a penalty of 150 points, if doubled.

2—A strong bid, inasmuch as it has been made over an intervening Overcall.

3—South correctly reads North's response as showing a strong hand. He is as yet uncertain whether the hand should be played at notrump, at spades or at diamonds, but in any event he feels that his Overcall in the opponents' bid suit can do no harm as he plans to contract for five diamonds if partner does not support spades.

4—West, with no strength in anything except hearts, now fears the Slam and decides to interject another bid in an effort to prevent the exchange of information.

5—Of course, inasmuch as West has again bid, North could pass, but the pass would not begin to convey the strength of his hand. He knows that South, for his three-heart bid, must have a spade suit as good as the Ace-Queen and probably the Jack. He must have the King of clubs, and South has guaranteed first round control of the heart suit. Therefore, with a six-card diamond suit, and placing the Ace of diamonds by inference in his partner's hand, he feels justified in contracting at once to take twelve tricks.

6—South now knows that his partner must have at least a six-card, almost solid diamond suit, for he has jumped to six in that suit without being directly supported. Inasmuch as he has not rebid spades, South also feels that North must, for his Slam bid, have the spade King, as well as the Ace of clubs, and he feels that with four sure spade tricks, two clubs and the Ace of hearts, a contract of seven can be fulfilled.

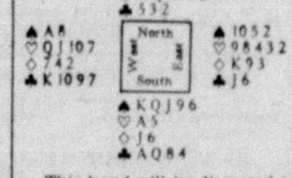
It is obvious that the contract was made without difficulty. In fact, North and South could have made a Grand Slam in any one of three declarations—diamonds, spades or notrump.

The hand discussed above, as I mentioned before, was played in a Duplicate game, and peculiarly enough, only one pair reached the Grand Slam—the pair which used the bidding given above. One other pair played the hand in six spades, merely because West had persisted in sacrificing up to the level of six hearts. The reason North did not bid seven diamonds instead of six spades was that he feared seven could not be made in any suit because South had failed to show the Ace of hearts in his bidding. The remaining players were content to contract for game in notrump, making seven of course.

Tomorrow's Hand

South, Dealer.

Both sides vulnerable.



This hand will be discussed in tomorrow's article.

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

Common Fly Is a Menace to Health

That pest, the fly, is instrumental in spreading many infectious and contagious diseases. During warm weather flies are everywhere present in great numbers and are really a grave menace to health. Every effort should be made to guard against the all-too-common house fly.

Dr. Copeland

Doors and windows in the home should be screened. This is a protection against the fly as well as the mosquito and other insects. It is especially necessary if there are young children in the home. The baby's carriage and crib should be protected by a suitable fly netting.

The house should be kept clean and neat. Food should never be exposed as flies are attracted by it. Garbage and other waste materials must always be kept in a covered can. It is advisable to cleanse the can thoroughly at frequent intervals.

Flies are dirty insects. They alight on filth and other material laden with germs. They have hairy legs and sticky mouth parts which enable them to carry germs from one place to another. A fly may crawl over contaminated material and carry the germ to a clean milk bottle, milk or nipple and quickly infect baby. This evil may be the underlying cause of "summer diarrhea," so common during the months when flies are numerous.

Children are extremely susceptible to the germs carried by flies. But often the adult will succumb to a disease transmitted by a fly. Many epidemics in the summer time can be traced to carelessness in guarding against this common insect.

Never purchase food in a store where precautions are not taken to guard against contamination by flies. All perishable food should be kept in a refrigerator. Food that is exposed should be covered in suitable cases screened from flies and dirt. In addition, it should be handled carefully and all food handlers should be examined periodically.

There is little sickness in communities where these measures are enforced. Carelessness leads to the spread of many diseases that could be prevented. Complete eradication of the house fly would indeed be a boon to mankind.

Until this is accomplished do not overlook the significant part that the fly plays in our everyday life. Do not permit yourself to be the victim of some disease brought to your home by this pest.

Most of us are "fly conscious" and angrily brush aside the fly. But if the house is properly screened we will be less liable to this annoyance. Take the necessary steps to guard against this harmless looking but dangerous insect.

The Beauty Box

By HELEN FOLLETT

Hair is either smooth on the crown or laid in shadow waves that flow one into the other. Clusters of curls and ringlets placed high have given way to the single row at the nape of the neck and a few rosebud curls laid flat at the sides or fluffed out softly. It is still the coiffure law that the outline of the head shall be revealed.

The best eye brightener is perfect health. The next best is animation. Girls who seek magic eye washes to make eyes sparkle are barking up the wrong beauty tree.

If eyes are tired, lids inflamed use a solution of boric acid. Dissolve one teaspoon of powdered boric acid in a cup of boiling water, cool and strain, apply with an eye cup. If there is the slightest suggestion of pus in the eyes, hie quickly to the optic doc.

Correct Manners

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Second Wedding Anniversary

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1—Please tell me if it is proper to give a miscellaneous anniversary party for my sister who is to celebrate her second wedding anniversary?

2—How should the invitations be worded?

3—I would like to know if it is correct to have a cake with candles? If not, please advise me what would be better for the occasion.

4—Is it proper to serve drinks as the guests arrive?

5—What could we do to entertain the guests who have arrived while waiting for the others? G.

1—It is correct for you to plan a party for your sister's wedding anniversary. Some authorities give Cotton as the symbol for the Second Anniversary, and some give Paper. I am not sure what you mean by a "miscellaneous" anniversary party. But nowadays most people don't pay much attention to the symbols given for the earlier wedding anniversaries. If they give presents for the occasion, they give things for the home, not things of the given symbols. (Perhaps that is what you mean by "miscellaneous"?)

2—Your invitations might be notes worded:

Dear Mary:

I am planning to have a little party to celebrate my sister Jane's second wedding anniversary on Tuesday, the first of September, at my home, at 8 o'clock. And I very much want to have you and Jack come. You will—won't you? I think we'll have a happy time.

Cordially,

3—You might have a cake with two candles on it, or you might have a cake decorated to imitate a wedding cake.

4—Yes.

House Guest

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I have been invited by some relatives to visit them during the summer vacation. They live quite a distance from here, which means that the trip will be rather an expensive one.

Of course I have accepted this invitation, but since I have never met any member of the family, I am wondering just what would be the correct length of time for me to plan to stay with them? Then, too, under the circumstances, will it be necessary for me to suggest paying for my board and room? W.

I wouldn't be able to advise you . . . I'm sorry . . . about the length of time that would be right for your visit. This would depend on so many things that a stranger to the situation would not know. However, since you do not know these relatives, my definite advice is to make your visit short.

Since they have been so exceedingly kind as to invite you to be their guest, you must not consider offering to pay them. I suggest that you take with you a gift for each member of the family.

Given in Marriage :: A Sequel to Heart Of a Wife

By ADELE GARRISON

Police Interrupt Prisoner Transfer

I stood in the opening of the woodland roadway for fully a minute before I ventured to peer out. Even then I did not step directly into the road from the path, but edged into the underbrush at the side and, cautiously parting the bushes, looked up and down the roadway from that vantage point.

There was no curve in the road near the spot where I was standing, and I was able to see a long way in both directions. Apparently there was no one within sight or hearing of me. There certainly was no one stirring in the roadway itself, and though I scrutinized the underbrush on both sides with meticulous care, I could see no movement which would indicate that anyone was concealed behind the dense foliage.

Where could my father have gone? Again the question sounded so insistently in my consciousness that I almost thought I had spoken it aloud. But I knew that I must neither voice the query nor make any other sound.

QUESTION OF SAFETY

Another question supplanted the first in my mind. What was I to do now? Was it safe to go on with the transfer of the Chinese to the big car, and to travel to the farm house with the bound men hidden beneath the camouflaging blankets and empty suitcases?

Was it safe to remain where we were, with the risk of discovery by any chance wayfarer becoming more imminent every minute of the morning's waxing?

There was but one answer to that, and it was a negative one, the possible consequences of which I did not dare to disregard. So it was that, with a final glance up and down the still deserted road, I worked my way back through the underbrush, and then hurried around the bend to the place where the two cars waited.

There was undeniable tension in the attitude of the four boys. Only Otto, secure in his reassurance from me about Mr. Veritzen's possible anger, was phlegmatic enough to evince no concern about anything else.

That the four boys would eagerly welcome action of any kind was evident, and, sure of swift, effective co-operation from them, I made my voice quick and incisive.

"Get those two Chinese into the big car as quickly as you can," I said. "Be very sure that their bonds are secure. Ronald, you and I will curl up on the back seat and keep watch over them. Bill and Hank, you get the little boys' bicycles and put them into the rear of this car belonging to the Chinese. Bob will drive that back to the farm, and, Bill and Hank, you will ride home the bicycles you used this morning to come down here.

"As soon as we get the cars ready, Bill, you and Hank are to start for the farm on the bicycles. Go by the other road. Bob will go with you to the road, and race back here as soon as he sees that you are well upon your way.

PREPARATIONS ORDERED

"Tell Mrs. Underwood to have Jim make ready that small room off the playroom in the basement, where we store trunks. Have him take the trunks out into the playroom, and see that the room is secure for the keeping of these men until we decide what we are to do with them."

The boys were like greyhounds quivering at the leash as I finished, and at my nod they went swiftly at the work of transferring the Chinese. The task was not an easy one, for the Orientals set all their ingenuity to making themselves as much of a dead weight as possible. But the boys accomplished it with dispatch, as they did the piling of the small bicycles into the rear of the car which we had commandeered from our Chinese captives.

The hardest part of all, I think, to Ronald and me, came when Bob had departed with Bill and Hank, to set them on their way with the large bicycles. We stood inactive, waiting, hoping that nothing would happen, but fearing that we would not be able to get away unnoticed.

Then, not from the road but from the path behind us, came a cynical but resolute voice inquiring:

"What's the big idea behind all this, anyway?"

Walter Winchell ON BROADWAY

Memos of a Columnist's Girl Friday

DEAR W.: And thank you very much for a lovely vacation. Rose did a fine job of subbing, don't you think? . . . Now that I'm so full of health—is there anyone you'd like killed? Or perhaps only maimed a little? Seriously I'm very grateful for the holiday and my restored peace of mind . . . Did you read that amazing and startling last paragraph by Alva Johnston on Promoter Curley's "Profile?" . . . About Rudy Valentino? . . . Curley, it appears, told Johnston that 24 hours after he signed as the movie star's something or other—the Police Inspector of New York at the time (Coughlin) took Curley to headquarters and showed him the star's archives . . Proving that before his Hollywood days, Valentino, under his real name, had a career in New York as a blackmailer and sneak thief!

According to a complaint filed with the Junior Screen Actor's Guild, a film company one day last week was working 72 extras at a wage of $3 a day, when the code calls for $5 for that work . . . Olin Miller was credited with that pepigram—"The proof of success in the old days was knighthood. Now it's imitators" . . . You should have credited Robert Quillen, who really is a pioneer of the pungent and pithy patter in the papers . . . That's the irony of your mix-up! . . . Miller, himself, told Quillen he was sorry you bungled it . . . There's a place on Broadway (under cover) where every time you buy a drink, and a drink for one of the hostesses there, she has to give you a lengthy kiss, if you're a member. Near 50th St.

Oh, do something about Heather Angel, please. . . In "Romance in the Rain," a Universal thing—her British accent gets laughs not in the script—frinstance: She pronounces "squirrel" like this: "squeerill" . . . Here's something for you one of the reporters dug up in Chicago while covering the Dillinger denouement. While "Snake Eyes" was in the bastile at Crown Point (or Wooden Gun), Indiana, he wrote a swell four-stanza poem, which perfectly expressed his philosophy on life. . . One of the jailers grabbed it out of his cell after his escape, and still has it. He's saving it for posterity. My friend, the reporter, didn't bother to get it because the keeper wanted too much dough.

Here's a story loaded with dynamite. . . It seems that the police have been on the trail of a big dope running outfit and were tapping the wires of the boss of the mob. And what do you think they got? . . . I mean besides a lot of dope information? . . . Which they will spring when they get the guy. They found out that his sweetheart (a married woman), who has been seeing him on the sly—is one of Hollywood's younger stars—not Shirley Temple, of course. . . They will probably leave her name out of it when the blowup comes, for the man's private life isn't important. . . But they might have to use her name to prove certain phone conversations, etc. . . . Too bad. . . She's so popular. Sending you details by air mail for your own eyes.

Max Baer's vaude tour, in case you haven't heard, wasn't too terrific . . . It means that the big boy will actually have to fight for a living . . . Strangely enough the radio, which was so int. ested in him before he won the title, doesn't care anymore, either . . . You might orchid the Red Cross which has decided to take entire care of the Dionne quintuplets during the winter months in Canada. You'd think one of the medical societies might have done something about them . . . There's trouble expected in Saratoga this year, owing to local political matters and some differences between the boys . . . Carnera, by the way, is turning wrestler, I hear . . . New York anticipates serious Red disorders in the winter. The Police Department has decided to put twice as many men on riot and emergency duty.

I hear that the police have uncovered a lot of evidence that this missing Agnes Tufverson was really murdered and that the case will be reopened shortly. It was a swell story, can't understand you saying the coast papers gave it little or nothing . . . Am sending you clipping from a leading Finnish editorial page printed in Helsingfors, Finland—quoting your entire paragraph about "Buy from Finland!" because it was the only country to pay its debts to the U. S. . . . Byfield and Bering of the Sherman thank you for your sugary sentiments, but things are okay and they are still there . . . Nan Keller (Keller Sisters and Lynch) and M. Purcell of Joe Penner's troupe are practically at the altar . . . Nelson Carr says Joe E. Brown's theme song is "With My Mouth Wide Open, etc."

A woman, who says her name is fictitious, hopes you won't think she is insane. She admits she's only a little foolish, but in need of money and she can't earn it honestly. In all sincerity, she adds, she wants to meet some "reliable" gang! . . . She says she's a Southerner, a graduate nurse, a nervy devil, fairly young and not unattractive. She wonders if you could recommend her to some good bunch of gangsters, or criminal lawyers who could get her in contact with them? . . . She says, too, that she fully knows you are not in sympathy with this line of work, neither is she, but she is desperate. Would you say something to her in the column, she urges? . . . Before she goes out to buy a gun . . . If you mention it, tell her to be sure to use the gun on herself, so she will shoot the right person.

I understand that MGM's picture with Bob Montgomery and Maureen O'Sullivan (it's named "Hideout") shows one of the Broadway famous places—and uses the names of certain Broadway habitues, as being owners of the place . . . I'm afraid some of the names will stench-bomb in reprisal . . . I like the Onyx Club a lot. Jim Doane., once Morton Downey's manager, has it . . . The M. Delmans' baby is due soon . . . I see where Adolphe Menjou has a new and costly car—meaning that it is practically Verree Teasdale's! . . . Add dirty tricks, but veddy, veddy comical: Roger Davis whispered to a lot of autograph kids that Mae Sunday was Mrs. John Dillinger . . . She was mobbed, of course . . . Have you found out the name of the film actress, whose car was used by the three assailants of that movie columnist? . . . That makes her an accessory before the fact, I think.

Burlesque Queen In Rest Home

The difficulties which would mark the lady's progress in such an institution, her eventual return to Broadway, and the furthering of the social career of a young actress, are but a few of the facets in Columbia's vehicle, "Orchids and Onions," for which May Robson and Carole Lombard have been chosen.

The part which will be essayed by Miss Robson is remarkably similar to "Apple Annie" in "Lady for a Day," which carried her to stardom. The young social climbing show girl will be portrayed by Miss Lombard.

Between 6,000 and 7,000 movie-mad mothers attempt to place their children in motion pictures each year, reveals Rachel Smith, Board of Education attache at the Paramount studios.

"The percentage of children that succeed in movies is infinitesmal," pointed out Miss Smith. "There are less than 10 children who mean anything at the box-office. Don't bring your baby to Hollywood."

Miss Smith cited among the few successful examples, Shirley Temple, who appears in "Now and Forever;" Baby LeRoy, soon to play in "The Lemon Drop Kid" with Lee Tracy; David Holt, now with Tracy in "You Belong to Me;" Dickie Moore and Jackie Cooper.

McLaglen's Troop Is Signed

By JIMMY STARR

HOLLYWOOD, Aug. 6.—Hello! Victor McLaglen's light troopers have been signed by Paramount to participate in the filming of "The Lives of a Bengal Lancer," but the doughty colonel will not be with them. The studio had planned on having Vic but, following his work in "The Captain Hates the Sea" for Columbia, he will move over to Fox to again argue it out with Edmund Lowe in "Man Lock," with sure-fire Raoul Walsh at the megaphone.

Nevertheless, 60 of McLaglen's troopers, many of them veterans of Indian campaigns, will add authenticity and color to the "Bengal Lancers," with plenty of trick riding and galloping thrills.

Your Theater and Mine

By KARL KRUG

GREEN ROOM GLEANINGS

George Shafer, Pitt operator, is worried about the cost of pictures from the independents for the new season . . . Which is probably the reason the stock bee is buzzing in his bonnet . . . However, I believe he would be smart in sticking to his stage show policy of last season . . . especially if vaudeville fails to materialize in any of the other houses . . . His experience should prove to him that there is an audience for the brand of show he presented . . . Especially at the prices he charged . . . The movie censorship agitation should make a vaudeville trial propitious . . . But, so far as I know, the Warners, who control both the Davis and Harris, have made no plans for a resumption of variety in either theater . . . Neither is there a movement afoot, as you may have heard, to do anything about vaudeville in the dark Aldine . . . The Harris office is mum about the stage show policy in their soon-to-be-opened Alvin . . . The Fulton has a stage, but it is questionable if vaudeville will ever be tried there . . . The matter of product for the new season is also bothering a couple of other theaters, but the release of "Of Human Bondage" by the Pennsylvania censors eased the situation somewhat in the local Warner office.

The Warner Theater chalked up its biggest opening in 18 months last Thursday and as a result may not go back to a single feature policy, after all. . . Look for a personal appearance of the grown-up Mitzi Green in one of the Pittsburgh cinema cathedrals. . . . The Georgie Prices are calling attention of their Pittsburgh friends to their new baby via a card reading: "It's a girl and what a girl! If we had wanted a boy we would have called Western Union" . . . While the M-G-M publicity department flaunts the clean-up campaign with a "Herald" on "The Girl From Missouri," entitled, "How to Kiss in Five Lessons" . . . It further states "that you haven't seen anything until you see Jean Harlow and Franchot Tone kissing" in that picture . . . Wonder if Jean will ever live down her Missouri girl performance? . . . Max Baer has gone temperamental on Paramount . . . The company wanted him to play Hugh O'Donnell's role in the screen version of "The Milky Way," but the heavyweight champ says he will appear in nothing with a prizefight angle. . . . Incidentally, the Stanley lost a pretty penny when that Baer booking fell through . . . August 20 will be the Alvin's opening date unless they change their minds again.

The Broadway wise boys are saying it will cost Constance Bennett well into six figures to keep her Marquis from contesting the divorce . . Fuzzy Knight of Fairmont, will get that Quigley award at the Variety Club luncheon in the Cardinal Room of the William Penn today . . . Harry Richman, whose first feature picture, "Puttin' on the Ritz," was "Stolen" outright by little Joan Bennett, has signed to do two films a year for Columbia . . . The John H. Harrises are due home from Atlantic City today . . . John Hooley, Family manager, was divorced from eight teeth before leaving on that Canadian vacation . . . There are 10,000 persons of enough "name value" in the screen industry to get into the 1934-35 Motion Picture Almanac . . . In the late Lew Cody's effects were several dozen neckties, each still bearing a $10 price tag . . . Wesley Eddy, former master of ceremonies, back in the Roxy, New York, again, postcards that he is now absolutely certain that opposites are attracted to each other . . . Wes says he knows a columnist who is keeping company with a nice girl . . . What has become of Vic Faust, the Swiss bell-ringer? . . . A recent raft of publicity from Paramount contained not a single reference to Mae West.

Your old Davis headlining friend, Walter C. Kelly, the Virginia Judge, may turn diplomat . . . His name has been submitted to President Roosevelt as the next envoy to the Irish Free State . . . Morton Downey took exception to my statement that John Charles Thomas gave the whistling Fred Lowry his start toward success . . . The only answer to Morton is that the blind wizard sticks to his Thomas story . . . His former stooges, including Jerry Howard, are all under contract to Columbia and working steadily, but Ted Healy's film option was allowed to lapse by M-G-M.

A Man of Means

In a city full of millions of hurrying, busy people, Jerome Turner was all alone. He didn't know a soul in all those millions, and he was terrified every time he had to cross a street. But he was happy. For 25 years he had waited for this. Worked for it. Saved for it. For the several thousand dollars in the safe at his hotel and the two weeks' vacation from his job.

His employers didn't know about it yet, but the job, for Jerome, was a thing of the past. During those 25 years, he had slaved at uninteresting tasks that anyone else could have done equally as well. And always, during that time, there had been that dream for the future. Enough money to buy the little farm that would mean security for his old age; but first of all, the vacation in New York and all the things he read about and longed to see.

Although he wouldn't have admitted it, the first few days in the city were a little lonely. He had always been shy about meeting people, especially women. He and Mary would never have become acquainted if she hadn't smiled when he stepped on her toe in the hotel lobby. She insisted that he sit and talk with her.

Jerome didn't know what had happened to him at first. In all his 45 years, he had never been in love before. Now he was just that much worse. He couldn't sleep, he couldn't think clearly, and he haunted the lobby at all sorts of strange hours in the hope of seeing Mary again. There were presents and flowers and jewelry for the girl. Jerome didn't know much about love and women, but he was learning fast.

At the end of a week, the man was a hopeless case. He was happy and miserable by turns. Though Mary consented to go out with him, he felt that she would never agree to marry him. For he was thinking about marriage by that time.

After all, he was a great deal older than the girl. His life in a small town had been limited and uninteresting. And he possessed only the few thousands that it had taken him a lifetime to save.

But he was determined that she shouldn't know about his drab existence, his limited means. His presents to her became more expensive. Theaters and night spots received a big play from the pair. Finally, in an effort to impress Mary, Jerome drew his entire bankroll from the hotel safe, and at the slightest opportunity, flashed it before the girl's eyes.

He gave out a highly-colored and highly false story about himself. He was, he told her, a man of means. A business man from the Middle West with enough money to support a wife to impressive style.

He knew, of course, that the time would come when he would have to tell Mary the truth. But after he had succeeded in making her love him, there would be time enough for that. There was still the money for the little farm.

The girl had none of the characteristics of a gold-digger, even from the first. At times she protested because she felt that Jerome was spending his money too freely. When that happened, the man laughed heartily and flourished the bankroll again.

"What's a few dollars," he demanded, "to a man like me? If it's gonna make you like me, I don't care how much I spend. You do like me some, don't you, Mary?"

She confessed willingly that she did.

Jerome felt sure that she meant what she said, and at the end of the second week, he was all set for the proposal. Mary had encouraged him in so many little ways, and when she consented to have supper in his hotel suite, he knew that his opportunity had come.

While they were alone, he would ask her to marry him. Perhaps he would tell her the truth then. Tell her that he wasn't rich, not a man of means, but a poor plodder who loved her and wanted her to share his life's dream. If she really loved him, it wouldn't matter.

Before the dinner was served, Mary persuaded Jerome to have a drink. And for a man to whom liquor had never been anything but the subject of a temperance lecture, he did a fairly good job on it.

Jerome never did taste that dinner. He felt himself growing extremely drowsy, and a moment later, he was completely out of the picture.

When he awoke a short time later, dizzy and with a roaring headache, Mary was gone. Gone, too, was Jerome's wallet containing every cent he owned in the world.

It is needless to describe the man's feelings. The shock of disillusionment was tough enough, but there was the added knowledge that he had nothing now. No security for the future, no farm, no freedom. He would have to go back to the despised job and start all over again.

Tough, very, very tough . . .

Mary was many miles away by that time. She was on a train heading West, holding the hand of a sickly youth who sat beside her.

"I would have done anything, Eddie," she told him, "to get you out where you'd have a chance to get well. Anything, even to lifting a guy's roll. I don't even feel like I done wrong, doing that.

"If he was some poor dope that needed the dough, I never would've been able to do it. But a big spender like him, flashing a roll that'd choke an elephant every time I seen him—I knew he'd never miss a few thousand bucks." . . .

PLAYS AND PLAYERS :-: By William J. Lewis

"Her Master's Voice," sixth production of the Pittsburgh Civic Playhouse in its summer season in the Arnold School, and fourth of the six subscription plays listed for presentation, will be given its first local performance tonight. Written by Clare Kummer, this comedy was a hit of the late season in New York. It will be succeeded by "The Female of the Species," drama by Alfred L. Golden, of Pittsburgh, to be staged next week with Judith Anderson as guest star. It will be a premiere, and Miss Anderson will arrive tomorrow to join in the rehearsals, in which the local members of the cast have been engaged for a couple of weeks.

Didn't you like the way Walter Winchell sat down a Hollywood writer the other day, the offense having reference to Nydia Westman as a "second edition of Una Merkel?" Citing the fact that it was Miss Westman, herself, who was instrumental in getting her friend, Miss Merkel, the job of being the Westman understudy when the latter was the star of "Pigs." Mr. Winchell gave a brief resume of the Westman stage career, but skipped a couple of important spots. They were the ingenue role in the road company of "Lightnin'" that was headed by Milton Nobles, and the stellar role in the road company of "Lysistrata." Yet the Hollywood scribe probably was right in his limited viewpoint because Miss Merkle, who once was co-featured with Miss Westman on the stage in "Two Girls Wanted," does seem to draw the more important assignments in the movies.

One day last week Katharine Hepburn announced she was going to have another try at the stage, which, like many others in films, she evidently still regards as an artistic medium of more impressive stature than the screen. That feeling probably can be ascribed to the fact that she originally was a stage actress who had appeared in such plays as "Death Takes a Holiday," "Art and Mrs. Bottle" and "The Warrior's Husband." Yet it was in the movies that she won nation-wide acclaim, dating her right to a spot in the sun from her very first screen appearance in "A Bill of Divorcement," in competition with such competent stars as John Barrymore and Billie Burke. Each succeeding picture added to her laurels, yet she forsook Hollywood to try again the effect of her art upon a legitimate theater audience last winter. The play, "The Lake," was a quick flop, and her announcement last week came as an intimation that she was determined to show folks the fault was not hers. Why should she want to do this? Certainly not for the money, because Hollywood undoubtedly has more of it to offer her than the stage possibly can. The answer must be that she yearns for that simple wreath of achievement into which is entwined a literary and artistic glory that has come through the centuries.

* * *

There are still grayheads who remember Pat Rooney, and it will jar them to think that Pat Rooney, Jr., has been on the stage for 41 years, beginning, after the death of his father, when he was 11 years of age. He told about it recently in "Down Memory Lane," as Louis Sobol once a week heads his "The Voice of Broadway" column in the New York Evening Journal. And, as Pat recalls his experiences, they have all been pleasant except one, and that one had its compensation. It was in a show called "Mother Goose," and, as rehearsals went along, his laugh gags were taken from him, one by one, until, in protest he complained that by the time the show opened he would have one word to speak. As that proved to be true, he gave two weeks notice. The compensation was that in the chorus of the show was a girl whom he met for the first time, Marion Bent, who later became his wife and who for years was co-starred with him in vaudeville and musical comedy. He makes known, too, a bit of information that will surprise many afore-mentioned grayheads, that is, that his father came from England as a boxer, not as an actor, and made his first stage appearance as a singer and dancer at an amateur performance.

* * *

In 1901 W. C. Fields was a "tramp juggler" on the vaudeville stage; Pauline Lord was a dramatic tyro in the Alcazar Theater, San Francisco; Zasu Pitts was a mere toddler; Charles B. Middleton was the dashing hero of a thrilling western melodrama; Evelyn Venable, who was to jump from Shakespearean roles to Hollywood, had not even been born; Alice Hegan Rice had just written "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch," which has now been filmed with all the above ex-stagers having prominent roles in it.

* * *

Just to keep the Kummer family busy, perhaps, Frederic Arnold Kummer, husband of Clare, has written a play called "Julie," in which Lenore Ulric will appear in Woodmere next week. It is assumed here to be new since the title does not appear in the published list of Mr. Kummer's works . . . Laurette Taylor's play, "At Marian's," will be presented next week with a cast headed by Miss Taylor and Tullio Carminati, in Ogonquit, Me., where Maude Adams recently appeared in a Shakespearean role . . . Max Gordon's plans for the new season include a Broadway showing of "Spring Song," in which Francine Larrimore clicked in a White Plains tryout.

Adding to Your Culinary Prowess

If the honorable family is tiring of home baked ham and meat loaf for picnic menues and Sunday night suppers, today's first prize offers a royal innovation. Tucked away cold in a basket of goodies, chicken loaf will ease the heart of any sun-burned, mosquito-bitten member of a picnic party of a Sunday afternoon. Or served hot, with its delectable mushroom sauce, it will prove the perfect end of any week's menues.

Perish the thought, however, that it is soley a week-end temptation. If possible, it has even more ingenious possibilities as a mid-week surprise. And I have an idea it would get on well on the same menu with jellied relish, found in today's $1 prize winners. And what better finish for this lovely meal than one of the two cakes submitted today?

Cream Cheese Pie, also among today's recipes, sounds like it will be an instant favorite with cheese loving husbands. And who ever heard of a husband who didn't like cheese with his pie? Or pie with his cheese? Sounds like a good idea. Here are today's prize-winning recipes. Maybe yours will be listed here tomorrow.

Five Dollar Prize Winner

MRS. A. J. REIBER,
143 West Prospect avenue, Pittsburgh.
CHICKEN LOAF WITH MUSHROOM SAUCE.

One cup soft bread crumbs.
One-fourth teaspoon paprika.
Two eggs.
One cup milk.
Two tablespoons chopped pimento.
One-fourth cup chopped celery.
One tablespoon chopped parsley.
Two tablespoons butter.

Combine the cooked chicken, bread crumbs, celery, pimento, salt, paprika, melted butter and eggs beaten with the milk. Pour into greased loaf pan and bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees F.) until firm, about 35 minutes. Unmold on heated platter and serve with Mpshroom Sauce.

Two tablespoons butter.
Two tablespoons flour.
Two cups milk.
One-fourth teaspoon salt.
One-fourth teaspoon paprika.
Two-thirds cup cooked or canned mushrooms.

Melt butter, stir in flour and when well blended add milk. Stir until smooth and thickened. Add salt, paprika and mushrooms. Cook a few minutes longer.

Five $1 Prize Winners

MRS. C. MANFRED,
75 Almeda street,
Hazelwood, Pittsburgh.
CREAM CHEESE PIE

One-half cup sugar.
Two eggs.
Pastry.

Blend cream cheese with cream or top milk thoroughly. Mix together sugar, flour, salt and orange rind. Blend with cheese mixture. Add egg yolks and vanilla. Mix well. Fold in stiffly beaten egg whites. Pour into a pie pan lined with unbaked rich pastry. Bake in a slow oven 25 to 30 minutes or until firm. Serve cold.

MRS. IRENE VOGEL,
410 Chartiers street, Carnegie, Pa.
JELLIED RELISH.

One-fourth cup cold water.
One-quarter cup vinegar.
One cup water.
Half cup chili sauce.
Juice one lemon.
Three-quarter tablespoon salt.
One-eighth teaspoon pepper.
Half cup celery or carrot.
One-third cup cabbage.
One-quarter cup green pepper.
One tablespoon onion.

Soften gelatin in cold water. Heat vinegar and water to boiling and add to gelatine. Stir until dissolved. Add chili sauce, lemon juice and seasonings and allow to set partially. Then add chopped vegetables and chill two hours before cutting in squares. Serve on lettuce leaves.

MRS. ROY McKISSICK,
433 Mercer Street Butler
RED FUDGE CAKE

Four heaping tablespoons butter.
Three eggs.
One-half cup cocoa.
Two cups hot water.
Three cups flour.
Two teaspoons baking powder.
Two teaspoons vanilla.
Two scant teaspoons baking soda.

Cream sugar and butter. Add eggs. Mix cocoa with one cup of hot water. Sift flour and baking powder three times and add to creamed mixture. Add cocoa. Reserve one tablespoon hot water to mix with baking soda. Add soda and vanilla. This is very thin batter but do not add any more flour. Bake in moderate oven about 25 minutes. Test with cake tester.

White Icing

Two whites of eggs.
Two cups sugar.

Boil sugar with one-half cup water until it spins a thread. Beat egg whites until stiff, then add syrup slowly. Add one teaspoon vanilla. Spread on cake.

MISS MYRTLE CHALFANT,
212 Market street, Brownsville.
CUCUMBER CATSUP

Two quarts grated cucumbers (one-half to three-quarter peck).
Eight large onions chopped fine.
One pound light brown sugar (more or less to taste).
One tablespoon black pepper.
Three tablespoons salt.
Three cups vinegar.

Pare cucumbers and after they are grated put in colander and let drain until free of all the green liquid. Mix all ingredients together. After it is prepared it should be thick as applesauce. This requires no cooking. Seal in one-half pint jars.

MRS. GEORGE BENNETT,
Leechburg
MAINE SPIDER CAKE

One-half cup granulated sugar.
Two egg yolks, beaten.
One and one-half cups corn meal.
One teaspoon baking soda.
Two and one-half teaspoons baking powder.
One and one-half cups sour milk or buttermilk.
Two egg whites.

Cream shortening, add sugar gradually and cream until light and fluffy. Add beaten egg yolks. Sift corn meal, flour, soda, baking powder and salt together, add to egg mixture alternately with sour milk. Fold in egg whites beaten stiff. Add corn. Turn into a greased skillet 2 inches in diameter and 2 inches deep. Bake in a moderate oven of 375 degrees for 30 minutes. Serves six.

Cartoonist Noted In Vaudeville Dies

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 6.—(AP.)—Death has ended the long illness which afflicted Bert Levy, 63, noted cartoonist. He died last night.

Throughout the world he was famous for his stonecraft in black and white and for 27 years he traveled over most of the vaudeville circuits in the world. Recently he worked in films as an illustrator.

HOLD SERVICES FOR CHILDREN

Continuing a six-day dedication program, the Rev. C. V. Sheatsley will lead children's night at the new Bethel Lutheran Church, Library road, Bethel Township, tonight. Dedication exercises, celebrating completion of the new edifice, were held yesterday.

The Rev. W. F. Knauff, of Ravenna, O., brother of the Rev. George Knauff, pastor of the church, delivered the sermon. Another brother, the Rev. Homer Knauff, of Beaver Falls, will also assist during the week's program.

Aliquippa Man Hurt In Auto Accident

Alex Tsuris, of Aliquippa, suffered head injuries when the auto in which he was riding was squeezed between a pole and a truck in Island avenue, Stowe Township, today. The car was driven by Charles Calloway, 34, of Aliquippa, the police reported.

DID YOU HAVE A Radio
IN 1914?

Probably not . . . few did 20 years ago . . . and few realize how expensive their present radio would have been to operate then . . . or how little it costs to run today. Lower electric rates make the difference . . . and it's a decided difference! Today only 1c buys the electricity to operate an average radio (100 watts) for 2½ hours . . . in 1914 it would have cost 2½c to operate the same set for the same length of time. Today, as you have new and improved electric appliances to enjoy—you also have improved electric service at rates which have become consistently lower since 1914.

1¢ buys the electricity to operate:

Electric Appliance	Hours	Mins.
Radio (average)	2	30
Cooker	2
Curling Iron	4	10
Vibrator	10
Food Mixer	3	20

The length of time the appliances named in this advertisement can be operated is based on 4c per Kwh, in which classification a large percentage of our customers come. If your use of electricity entitles you to the advantages of a 3c rate you can operate the same appliances proportionately longer. However, those who pay 5c for electric energy can operate these appliances only four-fifths of the length of time stated.

Wrestlers' Brother Kills Self With Gun

RAVENNA, Neb., Aug. 6.—(AP.)—Charley Pesek, younger brother of John Pesek, the wrestler, shot and killed himself yesterday.

He was wounded in the heart with a revolver and died a few hours later. Young Pesek was a lightweight wrestler of ability.

Globe Trotter

Hello, Ladies and Gentlemen:

You veterans of the Spanish-American War who have been writing in to remind me about your convention, soon to assemble in Pittsburgh, need not think that I have forgotten. I am already arranging for the special Spanish-American War Veterans' Convention broadcast.

* * * *

To Mike, Jimmy and Joe—I have received your letters about your proposed bicycle trips to Chicago, along with your requests for advertising sponsors.

I am not going to do anything about it, because I think that not one of you is old enough to be taking such a trip. I know that 16 seems like a grand old age, but in these days of automobile traffic and long highways, I don't think you should undertake the trip.

I suppose you're sore now, but I cant' help it.

* * *

Mr. P. R. Blythedale—The address is the Home Owners' Loan Corporation, Benedum-Trees Building, Pittsburgh.

* * *

Cecil Mann, Monnessen—Nothing can be done about the bonus checks. You have your number and sooner or later the check will be mailed to you.

I have been preaching patience and talking about the great number of applications that the department has to cope for, but even at that I am getting impatient myself.

It does appear that the system of sending out the checks needs improving. I'll ask Guy Griffith about it. He is going to be home today.

Mrs. Giuseppi Fabio, South Side—Will you read the above paragraph, please?

* * *

Thomas Fitzgerald, the trolley superintendent, says that the reason so many 77-54's run close together in the morning down Forbes street is that most of them are returning to the barns.

He wants the Globe Trotters to know that it is no oversight on the part of company management.

FRANCES MARSALIS' FUNERAL PLANE TO HALT HERE

NEW YORK Day by Day

By O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, Aug. 6.—In the manner of Arnold Bennett's journal: I heard a typical Arthur Somers Roche story today. All winter in Palm Beach he fretted over a nostalgic hanker for a summer residence he once occupied near Darien, Ct. He kept the telegraph and telephone wires singing to lease it.

A few weeks ago he came East, hurried by motor to his arcadia, spent one night there and next morning moved bag and baggage to a New York hotel. Several years ago he articled for a villa in Normandy, carried over a staff of servants and came back on the same boat. Another time it was California.

Hattie Bell Johnston, packing away books against sailing for Tasmania, noticed one in a set of E. Phillips Oppenheim carried a graceful autograph by the author. Looking further, every Oppenheim was differently inscribed. She remembered at bridge one evening he left to look over her library.

At G's, a visitor from Palo Alto said it was costing Herbert Hoover $1,500 to answer personal mail. And there was palaver about the American city most unlike the rest. Many said Charleston, S. C. My vote was for St. Joseph, Mo. I have come to have little faith in most dog hospitals.

* * *

Silly spectacle — the silk-stockinged radical Corliss Lamont getting himself arrested. M. and I went to the park in the vast heat. Everywhere men with hose and the sound of spirted water. I splurged for ice cones and we sat on a knoll until a falling down drunk sprawled before us and began loudly to snore.

* * *

Father Joe O'Conner is a handsome young priest from a Jersey parish who has written many popular tunes. Last evening we heard him play his "By a Waterfall," one of my favorites. This man of the cloth has much spirited table talk and is also an excellent listener, part of a priest's training, I presume. He appears to know all the actors of the day and we aired a mutual fondness for Rube Goldberg. No one hears aught but praise for Rube.

* * *

After much slogging, M. and I decided on some economies this morning and wound up in a fit of giggles. The Mark Twains once began a fine-combing of accounts, deciding the only things they could give up were Harper's Magazine and monograms for guest towels. I don't suppose any pair sit so stiffly in public as Lillian Gish and George Jean Nathan. Or attract more attention.

* * *

A man in Seattle writes he did not read me for years because of the frequent mention of dogs. Then his wife bought a Scottie and he's acutely dog-minded. That is decidedly handsome. I worked from 12 to 7 in the evening and we went to a rackety-kax cafe called Leon and Eddie's but a fidgety uproar and we did not stay. And wound up at the Colony, always honorable with excellent restraint. A Richard Barthelmess looking fellow there. Also Rae and Edgar Selwyn and Katharine Hepburn vis-a-vis with some one. I had baked meat pie with a sherbet.

* * *

We came from the beautiful Music Hall worn out. Cinema presentations are too tedious. One-third could be cut from all. A note from Hannen Swaffer, fiery London critic, he was at the Pennsylvania and must see me. But when called he had checked out. I regretted for he's the most informed man I know from Fleet street. His handwriting is half a telegrapher's swing and half block letters.

CHARGE M'NAIR 'BANKRUPTS' POLICE FUND

Veterans of Force Ask National Control Of Pensions

The Pittsburgh Veteran Police Association will launch a movement to establish a national police pension fund, officials said today.

The action was taken at a meeting in the courthouse yesterday following a speech by acting President Thomas D. Malone, a former city detective, in which he attacked Mayor McNair's "ridiculous police policies."

McNair's administration, Malone charged, is bankrupting the pension fund by retiring scores of active and competent police merely for political reasons. He pointed out that a national fund would prevent such abuse and divorce police pensions from politics, saving the taxpayers' money.

He asserted:

"Organized bodies cannot expect any support from Mayor McNair. He has shown this by removing from office prominent members of the Fraternal Order of Police, including former City Detective John Fogarty and Inspector Andrew Charles. What more could be expected from the Mayor when he was not loyal to the organization that elected him?

"His firing of city assessors is only in line with his other actions. His stand against organized labor, including city firemen and policemen, is nothing more than can be expected while he continues in office."

OLD GRADUATES TO GATHER

Alumni of the old Irwin Avenue Grade School, now the Columbus School, North Side, will hold their second reunion at the Pines, Perry highway, at 12:30 p. m. Saturday. A chicken and waffle dinner is to be served.

The reunion will include men and women who were students in the school as far back as 1875. Prof. S. C. Farrar, 92, of Crafton, first principal of the school, will be present.

The program will be brief, with plenty of time set aside for renewal of old friendships. A number of the participants will not have seen each other for 50 years.

Dr. C. C. Taggart, 72, of 7000 Thomas boulevard, is arranging the reunion. He is assisted by his sisters, Mrs. A. C. Hess, 66, and Dr. Sue L. Taggart, of 6734 Thomas boulevard.

'LABOR, NOT ME, CRAZY'—M'NAIR

Mayor McNair, stung by the words of Central Labor Union leaders who described him as a "tool or fool," issued a retort today. Said he:

"So they won't debate me? Well, I'd like to make a statement in reply to that reference about me being a tool or fool.

"Any persons who are contemplating a general strike in this time of depression should keep away from the subject of mental deficiency."

McKeesport Patrol Breaks Boy's Leg

Anthony Cerncic, 6, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Cerncic, of 943 Jerome street, McKeesport, is in McKeesport Hospital with a broken leg received Saturday when he was struck by a McKeesport police patrol at Center and Jerome streets. According to police, the patrol was driven by Officer Harvey Sharpe.

M'NAIR KEEPS LIQUOR CASES FOR CITY

Police Court Trials To Avoid Giving State Credit

Police magistrates in the future will hear all cases involving violations of the state liquor act. This ruling was made yesterday by Mayor McNair, sitting as police magistrate in North Side, South Side, Mt. Washington and Woods Run Police courts.

Pinch-hitting for Magistrate Howard McNutt, who is on vacation, the Mayor was kept busy all forenoon rushing from one police station to the other.

Unlike other hearings which the Mayor presided over in police courts, he was "all business," conducting the hearings with dignity. More than 100 cases came before him.

In ordering city magistrates to hear liquor violations, the Mayor contended that inasmuch as police do investigating, raiding and testifying against the violators, they, as well as the city, should be given credit for their work, and not the state.

Carrying out his new edict, the Mayor discharged four liquor violators including a woman, but ordered them turned over to Alderman Ray Schneider, of the North Side, of hearings. He explained:

"Inasmuch as this is a new ruling and state informations have already been made against these defendants, I will hold them for the state. In the future our police court magistrates will handle them."

Saul Perlman, a merchant of 104 East Ohio street, arrested Saturday, charged with violating a city ordinance, was discharged when complainants who charged Perlman with "barking" his wares on the street failed to appear against him. Patrolman H. Lindner, testifying against Perlman, said the defendant was "barking" soliciting customers, that he defined arrest by saying that he knew the Mayor and that if arrested he would be taken care of. McNair stopped him saying:

"That's enough of this case. There is no one to appear against him, so the case is discharged."

The Mayor "paroled" a Negro for a week, so that he could get $5 to pay his fine. Of 24 drunks arraigned in North Side court, the first 12 were discharged. The others did not fare so well, as McNair fined each $5. He said:

"You fellows slept here last night and I think you should contribute a little something to pay expenses. Policemen must be paid, so help out a little."

McNair's knowledge of rackets was increased when he learned the meaning of "kitty." Police arrested Steve Sekar, alleged proprietor of a gambling house at 614 East Ohio street. A tin box used to take the rake-off was produced as evidence. A patrolman testified:

Asked the Mayor:

"And what's a 'kitty'?"

He was told by the policeman.

NEED NEHEMIAH, M'NAIR SAYS

Another Nehemiah will lead the United States out of the depression, Mayor William N. McNair told the colored congregation of the Nazarene Baptist Church, Homewood, yesterday. He said:

"It will take another Nehemiah to lead us out of this depression. And some day one will come along to say 'return the land unto the people. Then we'll have peace and prosperity.

"You know what would happen if I lined up the Schenleys, the Fricks, the Mellons and all the rest of them and said: 'Give the land back to the people.' Everybody'd laugh at me. But some day someone who is inspired will say it and everybody will obey. Then we'll have no more depressions."

Death Breaks Up This Women's Flying Team

MISS HELEN RICHEY (LEFT) AND MRS. FRANCES MARSALIS AFTER THEY HAD SET A NEW WORLD ENDURANCE RECORD

Miss Richey, the Pittsburgh girl flier, with Mrs. Marsalis shortly after they had flown the "Outdoor Girl" at Miami to a new world record for endurance flying for women. Now Mrs. Marsalis lies dead, victim of a crash in a race with Miss Richey.

SO SHE STOPS LEAPS IN SKY

DAYTON, O., Aug. 6.—(AP.)—Miss Lucile H. Parker, of South Charleston, W. Va., isn't going to make any more parachute jumps. She said so today.

For the second time in two days as a performer at the national women's air meet here, she had to use her second, or auxiliary, 'chute after the first one failed to open.

She sprained an ankle yesterday in landing. She said:

"I'm never going to jump again—unless I have to."

Man, Wife Perish In Burning Plane

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 6.—(AP.)—Mr. and Mrs. Joseph McClean, of Los Angeles, were burned to death yesterday as the airplane in which they were flying crashed in flames on the abandoned Vail field airport.

The pilot, Vernon Carter, was catapulted from the ship and rolled more than 40 feet suffering a skull fracture, which hospital attendants feared would result fatally.

Airplane Stalls, Pilot Dies in Crash

READING, Aug. 6.—(AP.)—Paul Heffner, 32, was killed yesterday while flying at Madeira Field, when his plane stalled, went into a spin and fell 200 feet.

The crash occurred 20 minutes after Heffner had taken off. He made a sharp left turn and lost speed and the plane was too close to the ground to bring it out of the spin. The plane fell about a half mile from the landing field.

Homemade Plane Crashes, 2 Injured

HARTFORD, Wis., Aug. 6.—(AP.)—The pilot of a homemade monoplane and his passenger were critically injured when their ship plunged into a rock pile in view of 2,500 picnickers yesterday.

Norman Zunker, 33, builder and pilot of the plane, attempted a sharp bank while flying low and the ship sideslipped and crashed.

Crash Here Fatal To Cleveland Man

Frank Porter, 31, of Cleveland, died yesterday in St. John's Hospital from a fractured skull received Friday when his automobile skidded into a pole at California and Island avenues, North Side. His wife, Mrs. Arlene Porter, had been treated at the same hospital for injuries received in the accident.

South Side Man Hurt In Fall on Stairs

Falling down a flight of stairs in his home early today, Harry L. Planitzer, 47, of rear 2518 Sarah street, was taken to South Side Hospital with a forehead laceration and possible concussion of the brain, police reported.

Woman Injured in Fall Down Stairs

Mrs. Rachel Morris, 61, of 1213 Boyle street, suffered a broken right arm yesterday when she fell down a flight of stairs in her home. She was taken to Allegheny General Hospital.

2 DAYS IN PLANE WITH CORPSE

BLYTHE, Cal., Aug. 6.—(AP.)—Trapped for two days in the cockpit of a plane beside the body of his flying companion on the Colorado River bottom, William Henry of San Diego lay critically ill in a hospital today.

He was rescued yesterday by cowboys who searched the area when Pilot Walter Ballard, with a broken shoulder, and several fractured ribs, fought his way through the blazing heat of the Imperial Valley to bring word of the crash.

Trapped in the plane's wreckage with Henry was the body of James McFadden, of San Diego. He was killed Friday when the plane crashed as Ballard tried to "pancake" to safety on the river bottom to escape a severe desert storm.

Gambling Halted In New Orleans

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 6.—(AP.)—The lid appeared to have been completely clamped down on gambling in New Orleans today when city police ordered a ban on games of chance sponsored by civic and church organizations after raiding a lotto party given by the Ninth Ward Protective Association.

Someone Must Live On Mount Vesuvius, It's Smokey There

By ARTHUR (BUGS) BAER

The first man who saw Vesuvius figured people must live in there because he saw smoke coming out of the chimney.

That goes for the rest of Europe, too. There's people living there.

There ain't much smoke coming out of the chimney. That's because the diplomats have stuffed up the flue.

Last week was very quiet. There is never any bombing or shooting when an illustrious general dies in bed. Yet, that was the music he loved.

Soon the detonating orchestra will strike up its explosive harmony. Men have been killed illegally and legally. The books must be balanced.

HELEN RICHEY IN RACE FATAL TO FRIEND

Girl Who Crashed to Death Also Paired With Mrs. Thaden

DAYTON, O., Aug. 6.—(AP.)—Over the air lanes she flew fearlessly in life, Mrs. Frances Harrell Marsalis, 39, will travel in death.

Mrs. Marsalis

The aviatrix, co-holder of the women's refueling endurance flight record, was killed yesterday when her light biplane plunged to earth within sight of the last marker of the 50-mile feature race of the national women's air meet.

The funeral ship is to make a brief stop at Pittsburgh where Mrs. Marsalis is well known and where she stopped before coming here.

Her ship caught in the backwash of five other planes, nosed down, dug a hole three feet deep in the ground, then somersaulted.

Air field officials said they felt certain the backwash from the five other ships was responsible for the tragedy.

Pointing out that the victim's craft was only a light biplane, they said:

"That would be enough to send any plane down."

The crash occurred on the fifth and final lap at the second of the three pylons charting the triangular course. The plane's gasoline tank was found near the point where the ship struck, leading officials to believe this prevented this ship from catching fire.

HELEN RICHEY IN RACE

Miss Helen Richey, of McKeesport, Pa., holder with Mrs. Marsalis of the endurance record of 9 days 21 hours and 42 minutes, established in Miami, Fla., last December 30, was piloting one of the 11 ships which started the race.

She did not know of her former partner's death until she landed, in second place, before some 6,000 spectators. The race was won by Miss Edna M. Gardner, of the United States Naval Hospital, Washington.

Miss Richey said, when she learned of the crash:

"It's terrible."

EX-MATE FLIES ON

Advised at Newark, N. J., airport that his former wife had met death, William Marsalis, co-pilot for a transport company, made his regular run to Washington. They were divorced August 2 in Augusta, Ga.

Tentative plans considered by friends of the dead flier here included an aerial funeral, with services conducted in a plane high over New York.

Mrs. Marsalis also shared honors with another Pittsburgher, Mrs. Louise McPhetridge Thaden, with whom she flew in the "Flying Boudoir" in breaking an endurance mark for women.

'Ladybird's' Ex-Mate Will Attend Rites

WASHINGTON, Aug. 6.—(AP.)—William Marsalis, who piloted an Eastern Air Transport plane to Washington immediately after learning of the death of his former wife, Mrs. Frances Marsalis, said last night he had asked to be relieved from the return run today.

Marsalis was informed of the noted aviatrix's death in a crash at Dayton just before he took off from Newark yesterday. He said he hoped to return as a passenger, although he has agreed to take the controls if no relief pilot was available.

Expressing his unchanged affections for Mrs. Marsalis, he said he planned to attend the funeral.

He declined to discuss the divorce action, but said a preliminary decree was granted in Augusta, Ga., on July 16, and that a final decree was slated for August 1.

Mrs. Louise Thaden, the former Pittsburgh flier, was a close friend of Mrs. Frances Harrell Marsalis. They piloted planes together in the "Powder Puff Derby," national woman fliers' races at Long Island, N. Y.

Marsalis said he met Mrs Marsalis in 1928, teaching her to fly at Curtis Field, Valley Stream, Long Island, where he was an instructor. The divorce action was brought last spring, when, as a reserve pilot returned to active service, he was flying the mail in an Army plane.

Polish Day Outing To Aid Flood Victims

More than 35,000 Polish residents of Western Pennsylvania are expected to attend the fourth annual Polish Day, sponsored by the Central Council of Polish Organizations in Pittsburgh, at the Kennywood Park, August 15. Proceeds will augment a fund being raised among Americans of Polish extraction for the relief of the 250,00 homeless victims of the recent floods which devastated a part of Poland, entailing a loss of over $200,000,000.

Finds Sister Dead Hanging in Shed

Hanging from the rafters, Jennie Prescott, 50, of Boston, Pa., was found dead in a shed in the rear of her home early today by a brother, Dr. F. A. Prescott, according to the morgue report. An 8-page note found with the body gave ill health as the cause.

Truckload of Pies And Cakes Burned

In Mayfair
--With-- Patricia Pitt

Peggy Berger will be a mid-August bride.

Her engagement to Thomas Reed III, son of the Phillip S. Reeds, of Paris, France, was announced just several weeks ago.

Peggy, who's the daughter of Mrs. William A. Berger, of Butler plank road, Glenshaw, will be married Wednesday, August 15, in the Shadyside Presbyterian Church, with the Rev. H. A. Dalzell as officiant.

The reception's to be in the home of Peggy's uncle and aunt, the C. M. Harnieses, of Fair Oaks street.

Matron of honor for post-deb Peggy will be Mrs. Cornelius Decatur Scully, Jr. (Elinor Tucker), and maid of honor Barbara McDonnell. Mary Harnies will be her cousin's bridesmaid.

Mr. Reed has asked James Spackman to be his best man, and Alan W. Wood II, Peggy's cousin, and Harry W. Keller to be ushers.

Many Entertainments, Mostly Informal, Being Planned for Bride-Elect

The Allen W. Woods will entertain for them, and Alice and Nancy Milligan will give a cocktail party in their home, Elgin avenue, Saturday. On Sunday Helen and Betty McCance will entertain in their home.

That evening Mary Knox will be hostess at a supper party, and Mrs. Scully will give the spinster luncheon the Monday before the wedding in her home.

* * *

Two summers ago if social registerites were asked if they were going away for the summer, most of theme were horrified at the idea.

And mentioned how badly off steel was or some other stock. Even a summer ago there were not many away.

But this year everyone is out of town, it seems. And fashionables discovered in town are usually here between visits to resorts.

And not for seasons have cruises been so popular. More of the smart set have gone to Europe this season, too, than in recent seasons.

All of which is another proof that the depression is practically routed.

Men are having their day at the country clubs—for many more women are out of town for the summer with their children than men, most of whom can't leave their business operations for the entire season.

Men More Numerous Than Women On Golf Courses Hereabout

Out on golf courses way and by far more men are playing than women.

With the exception of the men, Fox Chapel Golf Club and Allegheny Country Club are practically deserted these August days. And all the smart gathering places in Sewickley are atttracting a mere handful—for almost everyone is far, far away.

New England resorts have beckoned to the greatest number of our smart set members, and Canada comes second. There's quite a bit of Pittsburgh at ranches in the West this season, too.

Those fashionables still in town won't be here many days longer.

The Ira F. Brainards, of Sewickley, expect to leave Friday—they'll motor to Bass Rocks, Mass., near Gloucester, to join their children, Elizabeth Nash Brainard, Alexander Nash Brainard and Antoinette Brainard, who've already been enjoying resort life for some time.

Chicago will be the magnet for the junior Robert Maurice Trimbles, of Edgeworth, who leave late in the month. They'll visit friends in Chicago and see the World's Fair.

Mrs. David McG. Witherow And Daughter Sail for Caribbean

Latest recruits for cruises are Mrs. David McG. Witherow and her daughter Patricia, a debutante of the past season, who have sailed for the Caribbean.

Former Pittsburgher Mrs. George Mesta is there now, deserting Newport for a taste of the races.

Taking an active part in Southampton resort life is Mrs. George Faber Downey, Jr., of Sewickley. She was one of the two women in charge of the dancing contests, a part of the dinner-dance and entertainment for the Southampton Fresh Air Home for Crippled Children, held Friday night at Canoe Place Inn, Southampton, L. I.

Mrs. Cochrane Compiles Federated Clubs' Statistics

By MRS. CHARLES M. BREGG

Of the 106 clubs affiliated with the Allegheny County Federation of Women's Clubs, all but six have answered and returned the questionnaires sent them by the president, Mrs. Robert K. Cochrane. These questionnaires are invaluable to Mrs. Cochrane in compiling her statistics for report to the State Federation of Pennsylvania Women and they affect the credentials of the delegates to the state convention as well. Incidentally Mrs. Cochrane is to serve as a member of the registration and elections committees for the convention, October 15 to 19, in Harrisburg, and Allegheny has the largest county federation in the state organization. Its 106 clubs cover a membership of 12,000.

Since Mrs. Cochrane is required to send her report to Mrs. Charles S. Musser, state chairman of county federation and club extension, by August 20, her "dead line" for the return of the individual questionnaires is August 15. These are comprehensive and ask for the name of the club and its place of meeting, the names, telephone numbers and addresses of the president, corresponding secretary and treasurer. The day of meeting and the number of members are to be set down, as is the date of election and then follow blanks for the names, addresses and phone numbers of all committee chairmen, the junior president and the junior advisor.

The blank which Mrs. Cochrane has filled out for return to her superior officer is much more complicated, for it requires the date of organization, the numbers of meetings held each year and the time of year they are held, also the names of the 33-34 and 34-35 presidents, which, of course, in Allegheny County's instance, are one and the same.

Information concerning dues, length of office, time of annual meeting and what committees are included in the organization's set up is also given. Under outstanding activities of last year, Mrs. Cochrane has listed participation in the State Federation convention which was held in Pittsburgh last October, redistricting of Allegheny County on account of growing membership and the establishment of a scholarship. She has appended several suggestions for county and extension work, such as a fairer proportionate allotment of funds to county federations.

Only one club was lost through resignation last year, Mrs. Cochrane states, and lists in the proper space the names of the 13 clubs which became affiliated with the county during the last year.

The "HALO" Permanent

Here is a coiffure worn by Bette Davis which combines the insouciance of summer days and the carelessformality of summer evenings.

From morn to sundown you wear your hair in a "sports" arrangement of faint shadow waves and fluffy ends. In the evening you simply slip on a halo braid and presto!—you're ready for the dance.

BRIDE

MISS SARA M. ZINZ

Miss Zinz, the bride of George Johns-Haggerty of Beechview. This is a Breckon picture.

Miss Sara Zinz, South Hills Man Wed

The Rev. and Mrs. George Zinz, of Neustadt, Ontario, Canada, announce the marriage of their daughter, Miss Sara M. Zinz, to George Johns-Haggerty, of Beechview.

Miss Zinz is a graduate nurse, trained at the Presbyterian Hospital here and for the past four years has been at the Magee Hospital, where she was supervisor and later head nurse of Wing C.

Mrs. Johns-Haggerty is a graduate of the University of Pittsburgh School of Pharmacy.

Mr. and Mrs. Johns-Haggerty will make their home with Mr. Johns-Haggerty's uncle, John A. Johns, at 1554 Beechview avenue.

Mrs. Mowry Will Give Readings

Mrs. Raymer L. Mowry will give readings tomorrow when Mrs. Chester F. Johnston makes her contribution to the Congress of Clubs' series of summer events—a musicale at the home of Mrs Robert H. Hartley, Shady avenue, Squirrel Hill. Also on the program are Miss Irene McKlinsky, piano, and Mrs. Marjorie Evans Stewart, soprano, who will be accompanied by Miss Eleanor Lally.

Mrs. Mowry

Mrs. Johnston and Mrs. Hartley will be assisted by Congress daughters and Congress members.

Miss Weinstein Married on Thursday

Mr. and Mrs. Louis Weinstein, of Webster avenue, announce the marriage of their daughter, Miss Ethel Weinstein, to Jack Schwartz, of Pittsburgh, which took place Thursday in the Anaheim Street Synagogue.

Sylvia Flygar, H. L. Crooks Married

Miss Sylvia Elvira Flygar, daughter of Mrs. Olivia A. Flygar and the late Dr. John A. Flygar, of North Braddock, became the bride of Harry Layton Crooks, of Pittsburgh, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. George F. Crooks, of Butler, Pa., Thursday evening in Bethany Lutheran Church, Braddock.

The pastor, the Rev. Raymond Stumpf, was the officiant. Mrs. Esther Getz, of Braddock, sang "O, Promise Me" and "At Dawning," and Mrs. Alvar Flygar, sister-in-law of the bride, played the wedding music.

A white lace gown, fashioned with a slight train and an ostrich-trimmed cape, was worn by the bride. She had a white net hat with a face veil, and carried white roses and lilies of the valley.

Her only attendant, Miss Isabel Miller, of Braddock, was in pastel green lace with an orchid sash, and had a green net hat similar to the bride's. She carried a Dresden bouquet.

At the wedding, the bride's mother appeared in a garden print ensemble with harmonizing hat, and the bridegroom's aunt, Mrs. Mae Broman, of Pittsburgh, in a navy blue sheer crepe and lace gown. Both wore corsages of roses.

Leave for Visit In Canada

Mr. and Mrs. Henry F. Brennan and their son James, of Thomas boulevard, left Friday for St. Jovett, Canada. They were accompanied by Miss Sallie Todd, of New Bethlehem, Pa.

Pittsburgh Girl Gets License To Marry

NEW YORK, Aug. 6.—Miss Alice J. Pickett, a music teacher, of Columbia avenue, Pittsburgh, and John B. Pearson, an attorney, of Trenton, N. J., obtained a license to wed here Saturday.

They said they would be married here later in the day in the Little Church Around the Corner.

Miss Pickett was born in Pittsburgh, the daughter of Dr. James E. and Mary Kear Pickett. Mr. Pearson was born in Trenton, the son of William and Agnes Armstrong Pearson.

Anita Conlon Given Scholarship

Anita Conlon, of St. Colman's parish, Turtle Creek, has been awarded a scholarship to Sacred Heart High School. These scholarships are awarded to the five most capable and deserving girl graduates of the Allegheny County parochial schools and the winners are permitted to participate in any of the varied classes and activities offered at the high school.

Miss Conlon

Miss Frank Weds G. E. Shepse

Mrs. B. Frank, of Duquesne, announces the marriage of her daughter, Miss Eleanor Edna Frank, to Gilbert Edward Shepse, son of Mr. and Mrs. M. Shepse, of Bartlett street, which took place yesterday afternoon at 2 o'clock in B'Nai Israel Synagogue.

Jean Jenks Chairman of Ushers

Miss Jenks has on her committee Miss Virginia James, Miss Euretta Davis, Miss Virginia Wickerham, Miss Alice Kleinhann, Miss Ruth Norton and Miss Marie McCahill.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. Curtis E. Smoyer, of the North Side, announce the marriage of their daughter, Miss Catherine Smoyer, to Arthur A. Edgar, son of Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Edgar, of South Hills, which took place Friday at the home of the Rev. Alexander Gibson.

Upon their return from a two-weeks visit to Florida, Mr. Edgar and his bride will reside temporarily at the home of the bride's parents.

* * *

The betrothal was announced by Miss Smith's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ben Smith, of Dewey avenue, Bridgeville. Mr. Smithson is a son of Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Smithson, of Carnegie.

Alumnae to Hold Meeting Tomorrow

The next meeting of Pittsburgh Chapter of Trinity College Alumnae is dated for tomorrow at the home of Mrs. Paul F. Eichenlaub, Alder Court Apartments. Mrs. William H. Connell, Jr., was hostess at a bridge meeting of the alumnae on Tuesday of last week.

FLUTTERING CHIFFONS THAT BECOME

By PRUNELLA WOOD

FLUTTERY CHIFFONS sound very delicious in warm weather, and they can be most delectable, too, if their flyaway tendencies are handled with restraint and taste. One can look lovely in a gown of purely Grecian lines, or in flaily pleated sheer that takes a slip from the Empire stage of fashions. What should be avoided is the balloony, inflated sort of chiffon which never settles down between zephyrs to the natural contours of its wearer.

* * *

IT IS ONLY fair to tell the woman who falls for the skillfully cut chiffon that a great deal of ingenuity has gone into the cutting, and that she must resort to expert cleaners to keep that cleverness of detail intact.

* * *

BUT WHEN one becomes enamored of a lovely mint and white creation, cascaded with jabots and what-not; or a tulle frock in which yards of sun pleating make a frou frou about the ankles and shoulders; or a divine hostess gown in which a botany design is crimped to fit the figure flatteringly, one might as well plan to do without something less important on the budget and clap the new desire firmly to the heart. For a "best" dress, nothing looks more successful than something delicately, extravagantly pleated.

Many Women Will Make Retreats

The retreats for women scheduled for August 23 to 26, at Seton Hill College, Greensburg, under auspices of the Pittsburgh Council of Catholic Women, are meeting with general response. The retreat committee has sent letters to the 300 retreatants of last year, also to the presidents of 200 women's organizations of Western Pennsylvania and to the pastors of the local parishes and many others.

A complete mass outfit has been sent by Pittsburgh Council to the missionary servants of the Most Holy Trinity, Holy Trinity, Ala., the gift having been made possible through the sale of old gold and silver trinkets of the chalice fund.

Miss Rachael A. Good will sponsor a card party at the Council House on Saturday afternoon, and will be assisted by Mrs. Mary Rapp, Mrs. Edward J. White, Miss Mary Fogarty and Mrs. John Barton.

Bridge Club No. 2 of the Council held its annual election of officers at the Council House on Wednesday in conjunction with a luncheon and bridge. These officers were re-elected: Mrs. L. J. Feinaugle, president; Mrs. H. A. Silverman, vice president; Mrs. Frances Bell, treasurer, and Mrs. Leon Plante, secretary. Officers of Council, Mrs. Mary T. Horan, Miss Catherine A. O'Donnell and Mrs. M. A. Bittner, were guests of honor at the luncheon.

Mother, Daughter In Los Angeles

Wilkinsburg Club Women Vacation

A number of Wilkinsburg Business and Professional Club women are either out of town at present or planning to leave shortly. Dr. Mary E. Coffin, the retiring president, expects to leave August 17 for Avon Park, Fla., stopping a few days at Washington en route. Miss Margaret Rogers will make Chautauqua her home for the next two weeks and Miss Lenora Wirth is leaving this week for a Pennsylvania motor trip.

Miss Ann Ort is in Atlantic City for two weeks and Mrs. Agnes Bauman and Miss Helen Kregar are summering at Conneaut Lake. Mrs. Virginia Hinchon plans to spend her vacation in Canada and Miss Nettie Fisher will go to the Eastern Shore of Maryland to be a guest at an inn managed by two Maryland Business and Professional Women.

Ingomar Women Will Entertain

The Ingomar Women's Social Club will entertain the members of the Woman's Club of Ingomar at a lawn party on Wednesday afternoon at the adjoining homes of Mrs. William McAvoy and Mrs. William Fisher.

CROCHETED ACCESSORIES PATTERN 748

Numerous American Buyers See New Creations of Noted Designers

By JANE EADS

Universal Service Special Writer.

PARIS, Aug. 6.—Pace the patient husbands. The coats, tunic dresses and blouses featured in the newest Winter fashion previews button in back!

A large number of American buyers saw Lucille Paray's collection of short coats of fur and wool and vapos of velvet or metal paillettes, all with back fastenings.

They also took in Maggy Rouff's collection, which featured a black satin and wool tunic fastening at the top and waist, and several taffeta and satin blouses with the same novelty.

Romantic gowns in the Florentine touch in stiff satins and taffetas and velvets, with long medieval or elbow-length sleeves and full length skirts, were introduced to Maggy Rouff's show for dinner and evening wear, contrasting oddly with the slinky shimmering gowns featuring slits to the knee and trains.

Other winter fashions tips in the shows included: Muffs worn on elbows, muffs of quilted lame and muffs of fur; paillette afternoon and evening gowns that clink like the armor of knights of old; capes of every length some touching the floor; tuck-in warts of fur and bright Christmas-like colored linings in dark coats.

High crowned coachman hats, bustles and old-fashioned fur stoles and 12-button colored spats were the highlights of the Chanel and Rein fall and winter showings. Chanel's evening gowns all featured big bows of taffeta forming bustles at the back. Her wool suits were all fur-trimmed with little matching Russian peasant turbans mended in the same fur.

Heim introduced coachman hats of stiffened satin and wool, matching ensembles of the same fabrics. Bright yellow broadcloth "gaiters" were shown in the same collection with tweed suits and matching vests. An enormous plaque of brooches of chenilled mirror and metal heart and a moonshaped, silver belt-buckle of classical bands, gilt birdcage pendants with mirrored birds and fur capes with stole ends, were other features.

Some fashionable women will not be able to drop their gloves this winter even if they conscientiously try. Winter coats featured in the Molyneux collection had sleeves and gloves cut in one piece like children's sleeper-suits. The only outlet for freeing the hand without removing the coat is a tiny opening at the wrist, here the hand may be wriggled through.

Gloves, by the way, are breaking out with originality in next season's preview. There are any number fashioned in the same fabric as the ensemble with which they are worn; for example, tweed gloves with tweed sport suits, taffeta and sequin gauntlet gloves with evening gowns and ermine mitts with ermined-collared coats. Fur cuffs are shown on many gloves to match fur coat and hat trimmings.

Another reminiscent of other days, was a grey taffeta with a semi-hoopskirt of cording and called "Little Women."

SUN-TELEGRAPH

BUCS DETERMINED TO WIN FIRST DIVISION BERTH

JAMES J. LONG'S SPORTS COMMENT

Athletes in football and other sports at the University of Pittsburgh will have new individual honors to strive for in the future. Aside from the customary awards of letters to varsity performers and numerals to the yearlings making the various freshman teams, special marks of distinction will be conferred in recognition of combined merit on the atletic field and in the classroom. Charles D. Wettach, chairman of the university athletic council and prominent businessman of the city, is to be commended for instituting and donating a set of annual honor prizes calculated to spur every Pitt athlete toward the highest possible scholastic attainments as well as to extra endeavor for individual and team success in his particular sport.

Charles D. Wettach

Starting with the 1934-35 term that will open next month, Chairman Wettach will give three medals each year, to be known as the Charles D. Wettach Awards. One medal will go to the student who has the highest scholastic average for the year among the winners of freshman athletic numerals. Another will go to the graduating senior on the football team who has, in the opinion of the coaching staff and university athletic officials, done the most for his team and who has the highest scholastic average for the year. The third will go to the outstanding graduating senior on any other varsity squad who has done the most for his team and who has the highest scholastic average for the year.

CLASS RANKING OF ATHLETES KEPT HIGH

In recent years, Pitt athletes have been making excellent scholastic records, the average of the athletic groups being above that of the general student body. As a matter of fact there were no fewer than 20 Panther sports figures whose names were on the honor rolls of their respective schools, including such outstanding ones as Doc Hartwig, Regis Wolff, Bill Keller, Arvel Fleming and Miller Munjas.

The Wettach Awards promise not only to maintain but to improve and broaden that happy condition. They are intended to lay the groundwork for the desired spirit at the student's start as a freshman and bring him to the peak of it as a senior, keeping him ever mindful of the fact that he is in college for study more than for incidental play, and giving him an added incentive to do his best in both directions. It is a laudable step by Chairman Wettach to encourage zeal in the classroom and to help Pitt athletics by inspiring on the field the spirit of working for the good of the team instead of for individual glory.

BASEBALL ODDITIES REVEALED BY CAMERA

Engaged by the American League as a baseball missionary, to go out and tell the public by word and moving picture what the game is about, Lew Fonseca has made some surprising discoveries. The movie camera disclosed to him that Jimmy Dykes throws a ball off his knuckles instead of off his fingers. Fonseca doubts that any other infielder can throw a ball that way. He tried it himself and the ball shot back and hit him in the face. Ed Rommel and other knuckle ball specialists always delivered the pitch with their knuckles pressed against the cover of the pill, but it is found that Ted Lyons' knuckle ball is thrown with the fingernails. Lyons pushes the tips of his fingernails into the leather when he grips the pellet.

Lew Fonseca

Everybody assumes that all good hitters bring their bats around as they step forward and meet the ball, but Fonseca's films reveal that only the .250 batters do that. None of the first-class stickers hits with his stride. All of them hit behind their strides. Your first-class hitter takes his stride, but holds his bat back for an instant, and that hesitation separates the good hitter from the mediocre one. By striding first and hitting a fraction of a second later, the good hitter keeps himself in position to meet anything the pitcher may throw, instead of being caught flat-footed by a change of pace or a suddenly breaking curve. All good hitters do their hitting with wrist and forearm. They don't swing from the ground. The bat travels about 18 inches before meeting the ball; never farther than two feet.

DENMARK PRODUCES NEWEST TRACK STAR

Denmark has given the running world a new sensation in the mysterious Neilsen. The latter's performance in a recent meet in Sweden gave the track experts of all countries something to think about, and they're still pondering over his surprising figures and wondering how far he will go. That Neilsen has merit was made evident, of course, by the mere fact that he defeated such an opponent as Kusocinski, the Pole who won the 10,000-meter title in the Olympic Games. That was something in itself. But there was more.

In scoring his startling victory, Neilsen beat Paavo Nurmi's world record for 3,000 meters by running 240 yards less than two miles in 8 minutes 18.3 seconds. The dopesters have computed that if the Dane were to run those additional 240 yards in 35 seconds, which is not too much to expect, he would do two miles in 8 minutes 53.3 seconds. That's ambling. And nobody ever heard of Neilsen before, either.

NEVERS NAMES BEST GRIDDERS HE FACED

Ernie Nevers, former Stanford University fullback, ranked by Pop Warner as a greater football player in his day than Jim Thorpe or any other man whom Warner ever coached, has selected a team of gridders he met during his college career, naming them as the best he ever played against in their respective positions. Three of the 11 positions are awarded to Southern California men and three to Notre Dame stars, the latter including Elmer Layden, former Duquesne University coach and now head mentor of the Irish.

Ernie Nevers

Nevers picks Mautz, of Oregon, and Hobbs Adams, of the Trojans, as ends, remarking that Adams blocked several kicks on him one afternoon. Stew Beam, of California, and Norm Anderson, of U. S. C., are the tackles. Ernie unhesitatingly named Noble Kizer, of Notre Dame, now coach at Purdue, as one guard. After putting Adam Walsh, of the Irish, at center, Nevers said he would have to place Bob Horrell, of California, at the other guard post, commenting that Horrell was so good he could be used anywhere on the line. "Give me Morley Drury, Elmer Layden, George Wilson and Elmer Tesreau in the backfield, and I'd die happy," Ernie added. "And how I'd like to coach a team with those babies in the backfield!"

Campbells	16—Wilmore	0

By PHIL GRABOWSKI

The first semi-final game in the junior division of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph's Western Pennsylvania amateur softball tournament playoff series will be played this evening when Manager Sam Carilli, 23-year-old manager of the Pioneers, of Carnegie, brings his team to town to oppose the Calvary Episcopal Church team, champions of Bracket I, on the Washington Park field at 7 o'clock. The Pioneers finished in second place in Bracket II.

Sam Carilli

The winner of this contest will meet the victor of the Commercial-Waverly game in the final round for the Western Pennsylvania championship.

Carilli's outfit is a strong one. Alex Curran, diminutive shortstop, is one of the Pioneers' star players. Manager Sheaffer boasts a classy performer in Third Baseman Boyles. This third sacker is the team's leading hitter. Manager Sheaffer's team won three straight games in its bracket, defeating the St. Peterites twice and the Waverlys once.

THREE TEAMS WIN

The E. J. Noftz, Campbell Lunch Shamrocks and Glenfield A. A. teams advanced to the quarter-final round by scoring victories in the second round yesterday in the playoff series.

Anthony (Bullet) Oskin continued his fine hurling by scoring the first shutout in the playoffs when he yielded two hits and struck out 17 batters to lead the Campbells to a 16-0 victory over the Wilmore tossers, champions of Bracket VIII on the McKelvy diamond before a fair-sized crowd. Carey Wincko and Joe Massimino hit homers for the winners. The Campbells won the Bracket III title.

The E. J. Noftzs managed to eke out a 3-2 victory over the Richfield Oilers, of Ford City, at Washington Park. The Noftz team tallied two runs in the second and one in the third while the losers managed to push across a run in the third and another in the fifth. Stanley Bazalewski pitched for the Noftz, Longwell and Tony Senepole hurled for the losers.

GLENFIELD WINS

Manager Clyde White's Glenfield A. A. softballers advanced another notch as a result of Thomas (Red) Merrimann's fine hurling and hitting. The redheaded flinger allowed four hits and struck out 12 enemy batsmen. Two of these were recorded in the last inning with a runner on second base with the tying run. Merrimann garnered three hits. This game was played at McKelvy Field after the Campbell Shamrock-Wilmore contest.

The F. J. Broad-Weise Newsies game will be played Wednesday on the Peabody High School field.

Donnelli Stars In Mexican Game

MEXICO, D. F., Aug. 6.—(AP.)—Led by Aldo (Buff) Donnelli, of Pittsburgh, the New York American team defeated the Atlante club, 2 to 1, in a close game here. Donnelli scored both his team's goals.

EXPLANATION OF RIPLEY'S CARTOON OF LAST SATURDAY: THE EVERLASTING FIRE—The fire that has been burning continuously for the last 500 years is maintained with peat from the Yorkshire Moors in the Checkers Inn at Osmotherly, England. It is a relic of the old coaching days when, according to tradition, the fire never was permitted to go out. Excellent griddle cakes still are cooked over the Everlasting Fire.

TUBERS SCORE CLOSE WIN

McKeesport continued its timely hitting and received some fine relief hurling by Hutsel to defeat the Washington Generals in a Penn State Association game at McKeesport yesterday, 4 to 3.

Eddie Lee, who has been flinging well for Charleroi, turned in another brilliant effort yesterday when he limited Monessen to four hits and harleroi won, 8 to 2.

YANKS RELEASE GRIMES

NEW YORK, Aug. 6.—(AP.)—The New York Yankees have announced the unconditional release of Burleigh Grimes, veteran right-hander and only spitball pitcher in the majors. The Yankees acquired Grimes after he had been declared a free agent by the St. Louis Cardinals a couple of months ago. The veteran, however, has been of little assistance.

HEATH INJURED

COLUMBUS, O., Aug. 6.—(AP.)—Capt. Mickey Heath, of the Columbus Red Birds, injured his knee sliding into second base yesterday and may be out of the game for several days. He was injured in the third inning in the first game with Minneapolis.

PIRATES SCORE DUAL VICTORY OVER CARDS

By CHARLES J. DOYLE

The Pirates were still in the second division as they rested in Pittsburgh today, but the club's morale showed a stepping up quality that may augur well for the remaining eight weeks of the National League race. The improvement in the camp feeling was due to the double victory of the Buccos over the Cardinals in St. Louis yesterday.

Reconciled to the widespread feeling that they are entirely out of the flag fight, regardless of any mathematical calculations, the Buccos, particularly their new pilot, Pie Traynor, are anxious to salvage a first-division berth. And with the harvest moon in the offing there is no better time than the present for making hay.

OPEN HOME STAND

To get down to cases, the Pirates are here for their longest home stay of the year, starting against the Cubs in the Oakland orchard tomorrow, the Buccos will take on all comers in the remaining days of the month.

Boss Pie is far from satisfied with the actions of some of his players. He yanked Arky Vaughan out of the shortfield yesterday and substituted Tommy Thevenow, partly because Arky had become slightly ill, and partly because his fielding on the trip to Cincinnati and St. Louis had been of a loose nature.

Lefty Grimm's flag-hunters will stay in town three days, but they must put on a four-game show during their sojourn here. The Bruins and Buccos are listed for a doubleheader on Wednesday. A dual bill with the Reds is slated for Saturday.

The Waner Act was keyed up to such a high pitch yesterday it proved an incentive for the remainder of the Pirate cast to go out and win a couple of ball games. Lloyd and Paul Waner, batting at the top of the Pirates order, hammered out no less than 11 safeties, not to mention a flock of line drives off Paul's bat that were hauled in by the outfielders. The scores were 6 to 4 and 7 to 2.

HOYT, FRENCH WIN

Waite Hoyt and Larry French were the slab winners of the afternoon. Larry, after pitching on the previous afternoon, rushed to the rescue of Bill Swift in the first game and carried on to the first triumph. Hoyt, who had twirled on Friday, worked the entire nine rounds of the nightcap and limited the Cards to nine safeties.

The early fight was a see-saw affair. The Buccos carried a three-run lead onto the sixth when Swift was shelled off the mound by the power of two homers smacked out of the lot by DeLancey and Durocher.

Hoyt drew Bill Hallahan as a slab foeman in the last struggle, but the southpaw was a setup for the Buccos and had to retire in the second in favor of Bill Walker, who also is a lefthander.

TIGERS AND YANKEES CONTINUE SENSATIONAL FLAG DUEL

GOMEZ LIMITS ATHLETICS TO ONE HIT

Associated Press.

A casual observer of the American League race might wonder how any rival could keep either the Detroit Tigers or New York Yankees from winning the pennant.

Racing along only a game apart these rival clubs have turned in some feats of near-perfect baseball in the past few days against tail-end opposition. Detroit walloped the White Sox, 7 to 0, yesterday to climax a six-game winning streak which saw them register three shutouts and score 37 runs in three games against Chicago, and the Yanks gained a 3-1 triumph over the Athletics.

GOMEZ BRILLIANT

Lefty Vernon Gomez, who pitched a three-hit game his last time out, gave the A's only one blow, a rather fluky double by Jimmy Foxx. Tony Lazzeri smacked a homer in the seventh and Lou Gehrig found Alton Benton for his thirty-sixth circuit swat of the year in the eighth.

The league-leading Giants staged another splurge in the National League to increase their margin to three games over the Cubs, with Cincinnati lending some aid. While the Giants were downing the Phillies, 7 to 4, on the combination of Roy Parmelee's seven-hit flinging, four straight hits, including a homer by Manager Bill Terry, and Mel Ott's twenty-ninth circuit swat, the Reds held Chicago to an even break in a doubleheader.

Paul Derringer, noted as a "hard luck" hurler, astonished a 30,000 crowd by blanking the Cubs with four hits in the opener to win 4 to 0. Chicago came back with a 4-to-1 triumph when an early attack carried Lon Warneke through to his fifteenth victory.

TWO FOR BUCS

Pittsburgh staged an uprising that had painful results to another pennant hopeful, the St. Louis Cardinals, and pounded the third-place Cardinals around in both games of a doubleheader. A flock of doubles in the seventh and Larry French's relief flinging won the opener, 6 to 4, with Paul Dean on the losing end, while the Bucs continued hitting against four more pitchers to take the second clash, 7 to 2, behind Waite Hoyt.

Cleveland's Indians, third-place club of the junior circuit, took a 5-2 decision from the Browns with Hal Trosky's twenty-third homer as the deciding blow. Washington and Boston split a bargain bill, the Senators taking the opener, 2-1, behind Ed Linke's six-hit flinging and the Sox getting an even break with a 7-3 triumph.

The Boston Braves and Brooklyn also divided games, Boston won the first, 7-4, while the Dodgers took advantage of an error by Les Mallon to score three in the seventh and win, 5 to 3.

Sports Shorts

Gene Mako, of Los Angeles, runner-up to Frankie Parker in 1932, and beaten by Donald Budge, of Oakland, Cal., in last year's final, was seeded first and favored in the national junior tennis title tournament opening today at Culver, Ind.

The Uruguayan horse, Misuri, owned by Jose Riestra, yesterday won the Grande Premio Do Brasil, the country's biggest race, running the 3,000 meters in 3 minutes 7 seconds at Rio de Janiero.

Bob O'Farrell, deposed manager of the Cincinnati Reds, is expected to sign a Chicago Cub contract today. To make room for O'Farrell, Benny Tate, another catcher, probably will be dropped.

Albert Sabath, head of the organization operating the Hawthorne race track, at Chicago, has leased Oriental Park, Havana, and will conduct a race meeting there this winter, he announced today.

WISE NOMINATED

ALTOONA, Aug. 6.—Sherman B. Wise has been nominated by the Blair County Game, Fish and Forestry Association for the office of president and he will be chosen at the next meeting without opposition. George C. Mock was named secretary and Ira H. Kemgy treasurer.

LOCAL PRINTERS WIN FIRST

NEW YORK, Aug. 6.—(AP.)—Detroit's defending title-holders were beaten yesterday by New York, 11-5, in the opening round of play in the Union Printers' International baseball championship tournament.

Washington snowed under Chicago, 18-4; Pittsburgh trounced Indianapolis, 20-9; St. Paul downed Baltimore, 19-10, and Cincinnati defeated Cleveand, 5-2.

The Pittsburgh nine scored early and often in crushing Indianapolis. Gildernew, on the slab for the Pittsburghers, was touched for an even dozen hits, but kept them well scattered. His teammates pounded out 17 and Indianapolis helped with nine errors.

Goettke, of Cincinnati, turned in the day's finest pitching performance when he stopped Cleveland with four hits and pitched eight scoreless frames after the first. The scores by innings:

Honus Says:

By HONUS WAGNER,
Former Star, Now Coach of Pirates.

To the Sports Editor:

If television ever comes how will it affect baseball? Suppose permission were given to broadcast a game. That would mean that millions all over the country could see and hear the game. There are a lot of ifs and ands to figure out. Baseball is an expensive game to maintain and some way has to be provided to protect the income that is making baseball possible. Better minds than mine can figure that out. But think of the people who will be alive 50 years from today! They'll think we of 1934 were living in a horse-drawn age.

SPORT VIGNETTES

By HARRY KECK
Sports Editor

Seventeen-year-old Arthur Armstrong will have some glamorous tales to take back to Honolulu and Bill Peet, former local sports editor, now located there, when he returns home from just having missed winning the National Public Links golf title in the tournament staged over the South Park course here last week . . .

The favorite of the galleries from the start, along with Scotty Campbell, of Seattle, who was eliminated in the quarter-finals, Armstrong made just one tactical error when he resorted to strategy to carry him through his toughest siege in the afternoon round of the final match . . . Instead of depending upon simple goat-getting tactics, talismen and other magical means he should have come upon the course disguised as Joe Cook . . . His opponent, Davy Mitchell, of Indianapolis, proved that he could beat one Hawaiian, but four Hawaiians are something else again.

Mr. Armstrong

Mitchell demonstrated that there is no greater asset in the pinches than experience . . . He plotted his final round match to perfection, depending upon sticking close to his brilliant but erratic opponent and waiting for the break . . . It finally came, as it had to, and when it did he had the shots to win . . . All even at nine holes and again at 18 and 24, Mitchell then won three holes in a row and never lost the lead . . . One of them had to crack, and it wasn't going to be Mitchell, stroking par for the entire 15 holes played on the final trek of the course.

Mitchell, the new champion, was in a good spot throughout the tournament . . . Almost unnoticed in the field until the last two days, he was satisfied to let Armstrong and Campbell hog the limelight and galleries and get their pictures in the papers, and, while they were killing each other off, he was moving smoothly to the closing stages, saving his best game for the dramatic denouement . . . He came seemingly from nowhere to the front and was in a fine competitive frame of mind when the big test arrived.

News from Philadelphia that Representative Louis Schwartz, father of the Sunday sports bill, is planning to ask for legalized horse racing in Pennsylvania at the special session of the Legislature, as a means of raising funds for relief, does not come as a surprise to sportsmen who have seen a move in this direction coming for some time . . . If the bill passes one of the first plants to be opened will be the old New Kensington fair grounds plant, which some years ago had a fling of the sport and later housed dog racing . . . The track is in good condition and could be made ready in a very short time.

Legalized racing is bound to come in Pennsylvania . . . Schwartz himself says that if his measure fails at the impending session he will introduce another bill in the regular session next year if he is re-elected . . . A number of other efforts to legalize the sport in this commonwealth have failed, but the more liberal trend of the times makes the passing of a racing law inevitable sooner or later.

LONGWOOD NET PLAY OPENS

BROOKLINE, MASS. Aug. 6.—(AP.)—The major league tennis flock will converge on Longwood today.

A high class mixed company opens competition for the historic Longwood Bowl and others trophies here. The following week the men will polish off for the national championships in another famous fixture, the Newport Casino tourney, which will probably find Frank Shields and Sidney Wood, United States Davis Cup singles players, making their first important domestic start.

George Lott and Lester Stoeffen, America's victorious doubles internationalists, are due to arrive from England tomorrow and rush to Longwood to take part in the team play, the start of which will be delayed until their arrival.

Due to its shift from a mid-July date, the forty-second competition for the bowl will have one of the best fields in many years. During the past few seasons the Davis Cup play and conflicting western tournaments have robbed this Brookline competition of much of its lustre.

West Va. Legion Series on Today

HUNTINGTON, W. Va., Aug. 6.—(AP.)—The opening game of a series between Huntington and Parkersburg for the West Virginia American Legion baseball title will be played here this afternoon.

Another game will be played tomorrow, and the third on Wednesday if necessary to decide the championship.

OPEN TOURNEY TODAY AT BEDFORD

BULLETIN.

BEDFORD SPRINGS, Pa., Aug. 6.—Horance Brand, Clarksburg pro, set a course record with a 66, five under par, to lead at the finish of the first 18 holes of the 36-hole open golf tournament here today. Ted Luther, Pittsburgh had a 69; Cliff Spencer, Baltimore, a 71; Sam Parks, Jr., Pittsburgh, a 72 and Vince Eldred, Pittsburgh, a 77.

BEDFORD SPRINGS, Pa., Aug. 6.—With Al Houghton, of the Kenmore Club, of Washington, D. C., absent, a new Bedford Springs open golf champion will be crowned at the famous mountain course this afternoon.

Houghton, who barely nosed out Perry Del Vecchio last year by one shot to win the title, played in the Canadian Open on Saturday and could not get here to defend his title. With the popular Capitol man absent, the delegation of Pittsburghers is out to bring back the title that Vincent Eldred, of Highland, won in 1932.

LOCALS FAVORITES

Professionals from Washington and Baltimore are here in full force, but there is a feeling that the big money will go to Pittsburgh this year.

Sam Parks, Jr., the youthful professional from the South Hills Country Club, pulled in just in time to get started in the pro amateur yesterday, and Sam, along with Eldred, Perry Del Vecchio, of Greensburg, and Ted Luther, the Valley Heights star, are expected to carry the Pittsburgh burden. The only absentee early this morning was Emil Loeffler, the popular Oakmonter. Dutch is likely to get in late, just as he did last year.

BRAND, McNEIL WIN

Yesterday found the professionals and star amateurs battling in a pro-amateur four ball, best ball match. Horace Brand, former professional at the Uniontown Country Club, and now located at Clarksburg, teamed up with Harry McNeil to win the first prize with a 35-31—66, five strokes under par. Perry Del Vecchio and Sidney Carson, of Greensburg, had a 67, as did Dave McKay and J. C. M. White, of the Pittsburgh Field Club, sharing second place. G. Diffenbauch and C. H. Waller, of Baltimore, and Bill Stocker, playing with Billy Nicklin, and Pete O'Hara and E. Hummel shared third money with a 68. The scores follow:

Horace Brand and Forrest McNeil, Clarksburg, 35-31—66.
Perry Del Vecchio and Sid Carson, Greensburg, 35-32—67.
Dave McKay and J. C. M. White, Pittsburgh, 34-33—67.
Alex Tait, Wilmington, and Leod M. Goss, Bedford, 34-33—67.
T. W. Norton and Roger Peacock, Washington, 34-35—69.
Nelson Zimmerman and Dr. W. H. K. McClarnid, Wildwood Club, Pittsburgh, 33-36—69.
Julius Boise and Hal Roach, Pittsburgh, 35-35—70.
Francis McNamara and R. Friday, Pittsburgh, 35-37—72.
Charles Manning and J. M. Cummings, Shannopin (Pa.) Club, 38-34—72.
William Walthour and O. F. Freeman, Hagerstown (Pa.) Club, 36-36—72.
Ralph Beach and Morton Rothchild, Suburban Club, Baltimore, 34-38—72.
George Goodrich, Bedford, and H. C. Peacock, Washington, 37-35—72.
Julius Piatt and Charles Capper, Beaver Falls, Pa., 37-36—73.
Dale Zimmerman and W. J. Dible, Pittsburgh, 38-35—73.

Personalities In Softball

Catcher Eddie Hayden is the hustling captain of the Koppers Coal team, which made a determined fight to get into the eliminations by defeating the U. S. Engineers in a playoff game in the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph's amateur softball tournament. The team was eliminated from further competition by by the E. J. Noftzs, of Lawrenceville, in the first game of the second round. Haden and Claus J. Olfe make up the team's star battery. It was Olfe's fine pitching that landed the team in the playoffs. Koppers finished in third place in the first half of the Business Men's Softball League.

Eddie Haden

Clarence Martin, who was graduated from Sewickley High School and the Slippery Rock State Teachers' College, is one of the leading softball first basemen in Glenfield. While attending high school he starred in football, baseball basketball and track, but in college he limited his activities to baseball and track. The Glenfield A. A. team won the Bracket II title with seven straight victories. Martin is one of the star sluggers with the Glenfields.

Mitchell's Victory Gives Indianapolis Publinks Tourney for 1935

Event Clinched by Conquest of Armstrong

By TOM BIRKS

When David A. Mitchell steps to the initial tee in 1935 to defend his National Public Links title, it will be over the course of the Indianapolis Municipal layout, upon which he has toiled for many years to perfect the game that carried him to the title at South Park last Saturday.

In the 13 years of public links competitive golf, the Hoosier state never has been honored with the titular competition. Many of its favored sons have traveled far and wide competing in the many championship and now, through Mitchell, has flashed into the limelight.

Officials from Indianapolis were here last week trying to convince Col. Garnsen DePew, chairman of the Public Links Section of the United States Golf Association, and his associates that the Middle West should get the tourney next year and that Indianapolis is the logical spot. With the brilliant victory of Mitchell, sanctioning the tourney for Mitchell's home town soon will be forthcoming.

WELL HANDLED EVENT

That the local officials covered themselves with glory in the handling of this exacting and important tournament is conceded in golfing circles. DePew freely stated that the 1934 National Public Links championship was superior to any in the past. William S. Haddock, general chairman; J. Denny O'Neil, local Public Links Commissioner, and their committee naturally are elated over a job well done.

The marshals did a perfect task of handling the greatest gallery that ever witnessed a tourney in this district, conservative estimates being that 5,000 devotees of the game saw the final round.

The golf displayed was brilliant, especially in the matches from the quarter-finals on. Under pressure, Mitchell played the finest golf in the afternoon round on Saturday, when he matched par for 15 holes with a scampering gallery dashing around.

A dramatic feature was the gallery's desertion of Arthur Armstrong, the young Hawaiian, on the last few holes when it became apparent that Mitchell was going to win. The Hawaiian learned a lesson in this tournament that will stand him in good stead in the future.

ARMSTRONG WINS CROWD

Armstrong had the magnetic influence to sway the crowd, especially in his Scotty Campbell match, when the Seattle medalist found the crowd cheering madly every shot made by his opponent and even cheering when he missed a shot. Not since the days of the great Walter Hagen, whom Armstrong tried to imitate at the start of the afternoon round on Saturday, has any golfer appealed to the gallery as Armstrong did. Maybe it was the distance the 17-year-old boy had traveled alone. Maybe it was his personality and broad smile. Maybe it was his penchant for getting into and out of trouble.

South Park's exacting layout repulsed all efforts, except that of Campbell in the first qualifying round, to shoot wide open its 72 par. Armstrong was five under for 13 holes, but that was not a complete round. The players had a good peek at probably the best municipal golfers in the country.

The Butler Country Club will not get the Western Pennsylvania open golf championship tournament next week. The tourney, originally awarded Butler, likely will go to the Pittsburgh Field Club. Definite action is to be taken today.

George Ormiston, W. P. G. A. secretary, said the change was being made due to a highway detour that necessitates a ride of more than an hour to Butler.

Playing over the testing Oakmont course yesterday for the first time, Scotty Campbell, medalist in the national public links tournament, scored a par 72, going out in 36 and back in the same. His card:

Par, out	4	4	3	4	4	4	5	3	4	36
Campbell, out	4	4	3	4	4	4	5	3	4	36
Par, in	4	4	3	4	4	4	5	3	4	36	72
Campbell, in	4	4	3	4	4	4	5	3	4	36	72

The annual women's golf championship tournament at Schenley Park will get under way tomorrow with an 18-hole qualifying round for match play, beginning on Wednesday.

Torrance Cracks World Shotput Mark

The burly Southerner, competing with a touring American track squad in an international meet here, got away a toss of 17.40 meters or 57 feet, 5-32 inch.

Torrance and his California rival, John Lyman, have been breaking the listed world shot put record set at 52 feet 7⅛ inches by Z. Heljasz, of Poland, in 1932, with monotonous regularity with the Southerner always a jump ahead. Torrance's best previous mark was 56 feet 5 inches set at Baton Rouge, La., in May.

BUTCH BATTLES GEORGE PACE TONIGHT

TONIGHT'S FIGHTS

Moe Smith vs. Gerrate Pap, Jackie Bell vs. Pinky Mikulich and Charley Baxter vs. Charley Bloswich, 3 rounds each, and Mike Rose vs. Carl Montebano, featherweights vs. Kid Sterling and Nat Liffin vs. Jimmy Milligan, 8 rounds each, Ridley Park, Midweek.

The first of two professional boxing shows in the Pittsburgh sector this week presents a card of six bouts at Hickey Park, Millvale, tonight.

Moe Butch, local southpaw featherweight, and Georgie Pace, Negro star from Cleveland, now making his home here, are in the eight-round windup, and there will be two other eight-rounders and three five-rounders. Pace made his local debut by knocking out Nat Liffin in one round and then lost a hard-fought battle with Ross Fields, another southpaw.

Jackie Holt and Patsy Hennigan box the semi-final, and Charley Baxter and Charley Bloswich are to the first eight-round engagement, and, in the five-round battles, Carl Montebano meets Red Bruce, Sammy Paris engages Kid Sterling and Nat Liffin takes on Jimmy Milligan.

BETWEEN ROUNDS

Bobby Belmont hops four furrows in the eighteenth hole to the Green Hights tool. It is a return palatial Barrone having used the dirt to pay for the original. Belmont was the guest at the Moose Lunch last week, the host being stopped when one of his men's eyes was cut open. Belmont showed a return to his old boxing form beating Jack Dalcherone at Hickey Park last week.

Harry Greb will appear in one of the preliminaries at the Ted Tetzlaff-Babe Ison at West Liverpool, O., this week. Greb holds a draw decision over Tetzlaff and a win over Ison. Happy Howard meets Charley Rice at Leipsic, O., Friday night. Charley Kalis, Leipsic boxing chief, has signed the card. Tommy Rice at Leipsic, O., the home leader, is expected to appear, with officials in the feature bouts.

COMMERCE AND INDUSTRY OF GREATER PITTSBURGH

LIVING COSTS SHOW SMALL INCREASE

NEW YORK, Aug. 6.—The cost of living of wage-earners increased 0.4 per cent from June to July, according to the indexes computed by the National Industrial Conference Board. The cost of living in July was 5.2 per cent higher than in July, 1933, 10.6 per cent higher than at the low of April, 1933, but 20.9 per cent below July, 1929.

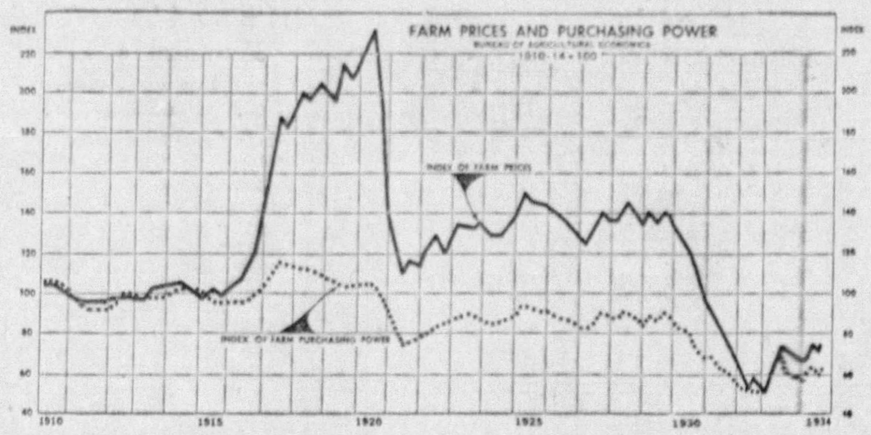
The purchasing value of the dollar was 126.4 cents in July, as compared with 126.9 cents in June, 139.9 cents in April, 1933, and 100 cents in 1923.

Food prices advanced 0.9 per cent from June to July, more than is usually observed during this period of the year. Since April, 1933, food prices have risen 21.5 per cent and since July, 1933, 4.9 per cent. They were, however, still 30.7 per cent below July, 1929.

Rents continued on their upward trend but at a slightly more moderate pace, rising 0.2 per cent from June to July. Since the beginning of the year, when the upward movement set in, rents have risen 3.2 per cent. Compared with their level of a year ago, rents are now 2.4 per cent higher, and compared with July, 1929, rents are 29.7 per cent lower.

Clothing prices as a whole declined 0.4 per cent from June to July, women's clothing prices falling 0.5 per cent and men's 0.2 per cent. Since July, 1933, clothing prices have advanced 20.5 per cent, but they are 21.2 per cent lower than in July, 1929.

Farmers' Buying Power Index Remains Under Pre-War Level



By JOSEPH STAGG LAWRENCE

This chart shows the life-line of farm prosperity. The solid line is an index of farm prices. The broken line shows an index of farm purchasing power which is computed by the Bureau of Agricultural Economics in the following manner: The bureau takes an index of farm prices and then divides it by another index representing the goods which the farmer buys for his business and for his own living.

The result is known as the index of farm purchasing power because it translates the price received for farm products into the goods which the farmer buys. Hence, the more significant of the two lines is the broken line.

It is interesting to note that farm prices, in spite of the recovery resulting from government stimulants, are materially below the level of the pre-war period. For every dollar which the farmer received for wheat, pork and dairy products in the five-year period 1910-1914 he received, during the month of June, only 78 cents.

Even so, this represents a rise of 29 cents from the low point reached in February, 1933. The broken line, covering farm purchasing power, contains the real grief of the farmer. It shows that buying power at the present time is approximately 38 per cent below that which he enjoyed in the five-year base period. Even so, this represents an improvement of 10 points, or 18 per cent, over the low point reached at the time the administration took office.

The chart has one fault which should be borne in mind in appraising it as a picture of farm prosperity. The index of farm prices represents only one dimension of farm income, even as the index of purchasing power represents but one dimension of expenditure. The other important dimension is the volume of farm production at which any particular level of prices is translater into farm income.

The item is of particular importance today in many of the regions affected by the drought. If wheat, as a result of providential and A.A.A. intercession, rises to $1.25 a bushel, the result on the chart will be quite striking. If, on the other hand, these two agencies of curtailment leave thousands of farmers without any crops whatsoever, then the line of farm purchasing power will be quite misleading. The ideal of the farmer, from the income point of view, is to have maximum prices and maximum production—two goals which are unfortunately incompatible.

TANNERS PLAN HIDE POOL

CHICAGO, Aug. 6.—The hide tanners of the country through their tanners' council, will hold meetings tomorrow in this city and in Boston for the purpose of planning a holding corporation to be financed with $10,000,000 of government money as a loan that will undertake to hold off the market the several million hides which are accumulating from the government cattle kill.

The tanners calcuate that this huge influx of hides "coming to market ahead of time or in abnormal quantities" can be held off the market through the medium of a central holding corporation.

Leechburg Youth Accidentally Shot

The victim of an "unloaded" gun, John Castiva, 23, of Leechburg, was in a serious condition today in Valley Hospital, Tarentum, with a bullet wound in his abdomen, hospital authorities reported. Castiva and a party of friends, it was said, were looking at the gun in his home yesterday when it discharged. Police are investigating the accident.

Boulder Crashes, Swimmers Periled

CHESTER, Pa., Aug. 6.—(AP.)—Five persons are nursing injuries received as a huge boulder used by swimmers as a diving place, collapsed and fell into a water-filled quarry at nearby Leiperville.

More than a dozen young men and women were sitting on the rock as it cracked loose late Saturday. None was seriously hurt.

Eastman Plans Railroad Freight Car Pool

By GEORGE H. SNYDER
Business Editor

UP TO THE present time, the work of Federal Co-ordinator of Transportation Joseph B. Eastman has shown few tangible results, but an indication of the possibilites of economy which may follow the vast studies being undertaken is becoming apparent.

Mr. Eastman has indicated that within a short time he will make specific recommendations to restrict wasteful cross haul movements of empty freight cars. The possibilities for saving millions of dollars can be seen readily.

Under present conditions cars sent from one railroad to another carrying freight are returned as promptly as possible. This is done because railroads are required to pay rent for cars not belonging to them as long as they are not on the lines of their owners. To avoid these charges, which are fairly high, railroads get rid of foreign cars with the utmost dispatch. While this is dictated by economy under the present system, it is obvious that it involves a great amount of expensive hauling of empties which in the long run costs the railroads as a whole a great amount of money. The system should be changed.

Pooling Offers Ready Solution

MUCH HAULING of empty cars could be avoided if cars, after unloading, were merely turned over to another shipper for loading and consignment to another point. Of course, this is done in many cases at present, particularly if the car can be consigned loaded to the railroad which owns it. But if hauls cannot be found which fit into this scheme, the railroads merely return foreign cars empty and send out freight in their own cars.

Under a pooling arrangement, it would not matter whether a railroad would be using its own cars or those of another system. This would reduce the hauling of empty cars to the minimum necessary to meet demands at particular points.

* * *

Railroads Jointly Control Express

MR. EASTMAN has not yet made clear the exact form of his plan. Undoubtedly it will involve a pool arrangement and some form of central control to ensure the fact that adequate numbers of cars will be available at all points.

The plan will be another step in the direction of unified railroad operation similar to the system for handling express which is jointly controlled by all the railroads. The system will function in much the same manner as the Pullman Company does in supplying sleeping cars. Without the Pullman Company or some similar organization, the individual railroads would have to own many more sleeping cars than are now in existence. This would be due to the fact that there is a great floating supply of equipment which can be transferred to different parts of the country to meet seasonal conditions. For instance, cars which are used on lines going to Florida in winter can be used by other railroads serving northern resorts in summer.

METALS QUIET, TIN DEMAND BETTER

NEW YORK, Aug. 6.—(AP.)—Moderate demand for tin, which developed at slight declines, stood out in otherwise generally quiet non-ferrous metal markets in the past week. While the volume of business was larger than in recent weeks, it was limited to prompt requirements. The market lacked any stimulus from tin plate and collapsible tube manufacturers who habitually cover needs in advance.

Copper remained dull at the unchanged basis of 9 cents for Blue Eagle, although some improvement in the export demand was noted toward the close of the week at around the basis of 7¼ cents. Some interest was said to be developing in the domestic market for non-blue eagle copper, ineligible for use in governmental projects, but buyers' and sellers' views were apart.

The undertone in lead held steady when the leading western producer declined but $1 per ton as compared with last week's local decline of $2 per ton. This was regarded as indicating a comfortable backlog of orders on western books, and there was no selling pressure. Business, however, remained of limited proportions as August requirements are well filled. Although producers opened books for September orders, consumers were apparently uninterested.

Steel remained dull, as steel ingot production sagged to about 26 per cent of capacity at the opening of the month. With unfilled orders on mill books said to be small, the outlook was said to be dependent upon consuming requirements in general industry. Remaining railroad orders were diminishing and automobile manufacturers' requirements are seasonally small. Pig iron was quiet and unchanged.

NEW DOUBLES TEAM WINS

By PAUL G. SULLIVAN

A dashing new combination of Dr. John O'Loughlin, P. A. A. star, and Sam Harbison, Allegheny Country Club ace, yesterday impressed a large gallery by rallying to annex the final battle of the first annual Edgeworth Club invitation men's doubles tourney from the favored all-Winged Head array of Dr. Dave O'Loughlin and his slim brother Billy, 4-6, 6-3, 3-6, 6-0, 6-2.

The wind-up affair began with Dr. Dave and Billy distinctly dominating the competition. They scored service breaks on both of their opponents to annex the initial stanza and cracked Harbison's delivery for a 2-1 lead in the second canto. Here, however, Dave erred four times in a row to lose his own game and from this point onward Dr. John and Sam held the upper hand till the end of the set.

After the rest period, however, Dave and Billy found the traveling rough. Gradually the enemy gathered steam. Set four went at love, but the going was more spirited at the start of the fifth sesion. Heavy driving returns of service by Dr. Dave, though, crushed Harbison's service in game five, but thenceforward the P. A. A.-A. C. C. coalition was not to be headed.

The fourth annual DuBois Country Club tennis tournament gets under way at DuBois, Pa., this afternoon. The men's singles crown was copped in 1931 by Emil Allendorfer of DuBois; in 1932 by James Schonblum, of Bradford, and in 1933 by Dave Devlin, of Johnstown. Devlin and his giant partner, Junior Kunkel, annexed the doubles last summer. Four Pittsburghers, Frank Broida, John Brown, Al McCabe and Paul Sullivan, are entered in the upstate affair this year.

Dog Race Betting Ruled Illegal

YOUNGSTOWN, Aug. 6.—Judge Erskine Maiden, Jr., of Mahoning County Common Pleas Court, has ruled that dog race betting is illegal, even if a parimutuel system is employed. Racing, however, continued Saturday night.

Judge Maiden gave this ruling in an opinion dissolving a temporary injunction granted July 2 to the Canfield Kennel Club, restraining Sheriff W. J. Engelhardt, Prosecutor J. H. Leighninger and other county officers from interfering with the dog race betting at Canfield, 10 miles southwest of here.

Thil Gets Verdict Over Italian Boxer

MARSEILLE, France, Aug. 6.—(AP.)—Marcel Thil, recognized in some quarters as world middleweight champion, outpointed Rinaldi Meroni, of Italy, in the 10-round feature bout of a boxing show yesterday marked by a near riot over the decision given in one of the preliminaries.

Spectators, differing over the merits of a decision in favor of Kid Francis, local bantamweight, over Spider Pladner, in an earlier 10-rounder, engaged in a free-for-all in which fists and chairs were the principal weapons. Police restored order by arresting the combatants.

FORFEIT RILES LOOP PREXY

EBENSBURG, Pa., Aug. 6.—(AP.)—The dispute which resulted in Charleston winning a forfeit victory over Johnstown in a Mid-Atlantic League baseball game Saturday night, is going to cost somebody some money, according to Elmer Daily, league president.

Shine Cortazzo, Johnstown shortstop, was ordered from the field by Umpire Shannon in the seventh inning last night. Fans say he hurled his bat toward the pitchers box, threw other equipment on the diamond and refused to leave the field as ordered by the umpire. Shannon, after 15 minutes, declared the game forfeited to Charleston. The Senators were leading 7 to 1 at the time.

Manager Vernon Mackie, of the Johnstown club, asserted Shannon failed to request him to order Cortazzo from the field.

Daily has ordered Umpire Shannon, Mackie and Cortazzo to appear before him at noon today in Johnstown, at which time he will hear both sides of the story.

In yesterday's Mid-Atlantic tussles, Huntington walloped Charleston, 11 to 5; Johnstown crushed Sprifingeld, 15 to 4; Dayton nosed out Wheeling in a 10-inning tussle, 7 to 6, and Zanesville's fast travelling Grays beat Beckley twice, winning the first game 8 to 0, and the second 7 to 3.

Screen Star Buys Interest in Maxie

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 6.—(AP.)—George Raft, screen star, said today he had purchased a half interest in Maxie Rosenbloom, light-heavyweight boxing champion, for "around $10,000."

Raft, himself a former fighter, said he would second Rosenbloom in a fight Wednesday with Pietri Georgi at Oakland.

OLD FURNACE RIDERS WIN

Old Furnace took over the South Park riders, 7 to 4, with Troutman, Old Furnace No. 1 man, scoring four goals. Buck Voltz and Schwartz each talied two for the losers.

Brentwood nosed out the County Police trio, 8 to 7, in a match that went two extra chukkers.

RUNYAN BEATS DUTRA

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., Aug. 6.—A subpar 31 on the outward nine gave Paul Runyan, P. G. A. champion, a big lead over Ollie Dutra, United States open champion, in their match at the Metropolis Country Club here yesterday and Runyan held on to his edge to emerge the victor, 3 and 2, in match play and five strokes in medal play.

MEMORY TEST

TODAY'S QUESTIONS

How good is your memory of sports events, heroes and dates? Can you answer these questions?

1—How did the heavyweight championship pass on to Max Baer following the retirement of Gene Tunney as the undefeated titleholder?

5—Who were the National League pitchers who twirled nine hitless innings against each other?

STOCKS ABSORB SELLING WAVE, FIRM UP

NEW YORK, Aug. 6.—(AP.)—Wall street began the new week with little enthusiasm for anything save the grain markets.

Stocks absorbed a flurry of selling in the first hour which depressed a number of leaders 1 to 4 points, some to new lows for the year, but prices later recovered partially, as bullishness cropped out in some of the gold and silver issues. The rise in wheat carried the May delivery above $1.12, a new high for the season. Other grains also showed pronounced strength, and rubber and cotton were firm. Bonds were somewhat soft, along with stocks.

An early drop of about 4 points in Union Pacific and 2 in Santa Fe and United States Steel carried those issues to new lows for 1934. Recoveries of a point or so from the worst followed, in dull trading. A mid-day rise in the non-ferrous metals carried United States Smelting up a couple of points above Saturday's close, and McIntyre and Dome advanced more than a point. American Smelting more than recovered an early sag of a point.

Wall street's attention was divided between the utterances of President Roosevelt and estimates as to the probably effects of the drought. With business in the midst of its midsummer lull, and the feeling in many quarters that the autumn business outlook had been impaired by the drought, interest in the probable tack which the government recovery program will take in the efforts to turn the trend of employment upward once more, was naturally intense.

Buying of the gold and silver stocks appeared to be based upon some expectation in speculative quarters that an inflationary needle would have to be applied to give renewed stimulus, but Wall street was by no means wholly in agreement with that prophecy. It was pointed out in some quarters that the drought seemed likely to have given as much upward stimulus to farm prices as the administration would care to see for the time being, and that any further rise resulting from inflation might work real hardship upon the worker and his dinner pail.

The manner in which the market was able to absorb the week-end flurry of selling which appeared at the opening was regarded as encouraging by some analysts, who pointed out that the list as a whole had not yet broken the resistance levels touched in the sharp slump of late July, and that if it failed to do so, it might be a sign indicating a resumption of the advance.

Week-end business surveys stressed the comparatively good showing made by retail sales, in the face of the drought. Statistics appearing today failed to shed much new light on the business picture. Chesapeake and Ohio reported total freight loadings for last week of 27,537 cars, a slight decline from the previous week's total of 29,561, and well under the 32,530 for the like week of last year. Santa Fe, however, reflecting increased movement of livestock and grain, reported 25,613 cars, slightly over the previous week's total of 25,459, and well above the 21,176 for the like week of last year.

The decidedly pacifist sentiments uttered by Chancellor Hitler of Germany over the week-end, together with the subsidence of violence in Austria, were interpreted as reassuring, so far as the foreign field was concerned, but the financial community was more concerned with domestic problems.

GRAIN VALUES TURN DOWN

CHICAGO, Aug. 6.—Unusual irregularity characterized early price changes in grain markets today, with initial sales of wheat ranging simultaneously nearly 3 cents apart in different sections of the pit. Later there was a general sag, influenced bearishly by moisture relief for parts of the corn belt.

With Liverpool and Winnipeg markets closed for a holiday, Chicago wheat started ½ cent lower to an advance of 2¼ cents, December $1.06½-1.09, and subsequently receded all around to well below Saturday's finish. Corn started unchanged to ½ down and subsequently declined all around.

BUSINESS SEES SLIGHT GAINS DESPITE SLUMP

By MERRYLE S. RUKEYSER

NEW YORK, Aug. 5.—With business still in the throes of a summer slump, sentiment improved slightly last week.

The immediate war scare subsided, and a partial recovery in security prices accompanied an upturn in commodity quotations. The continuing effects of the drought remain the overshadowing influence in the commodity markets.

Mr. Rukeyser

The extreme heat has been favorable to the distribution of seasonable products at retail, and has also seared into the consciousness of the American people a new appreciation of the nascent airconditioning industry.

But general business remains quiet and dull. The steel industry continues to lag, and motor plants, which have been at the forefront of activity, are curtailing moderately.

SEASONAL SLUMP

Apart from seasonal factors, general business reached a peak in May, and then began to taper off. The shutting down of the textile industry was the most significant step toward recession, and the summer curtailment in steel, following the abnormal spurt earlier in anticipation of rising prices and strike interfenences, has intensified the setback. The recession has been exaggerated in the public mind by comparisons with a year ago, when business was still making a counter-seasonal advance.

However, the statistics of a year ago were inflated with speculative buying in anticipation of higher prices because of the codes and processing taxes and because of fears of inflation. Accordingly the spring and early summer spurt last year represented forward buying, which normally would have been spread more evenly through the year. Accordingly, by August a reaction was under way, which carried business and industry sharply downward until December.

BUSINESS HEALTHIER

This year the technical position of business is vastly healthier. There has been no speculative piling up of inventories in anticipation of quick price advances. A spirit of caution, if not pessimism, has kept business from getting overextended. Accordingly, there is no reason to believe that, as was the case a year ago, it was riding for a fall.

On the contrary, seasonal influences should soon come into play, and raise the gross volume of business in the autumn above the meager summer level.

In spite of the evidence of declining profit margins of some leading corporations as a result of cost increasing burdens, representative companies nevertheless showed in the second quarter an improvement in net income. Thirty large companies reported a gain of 43 per cent over the first quarter, and a 66 per cent increase over the second quarter of 1933. Pessimism marketwise has been caused more by fears concerning the third quarter earnings than by the actual record for the second quarter.

NEEDS FRESH STIMULUS

At Washington, there is a disposition to place increasing emphasis on the trade building potentialities of the home building and home modernization program. Since the depression has been greatest in the construction industry, there is solid basis for this view. Moreover, the country during the depression has fallen sharply behind in home maintenance.

Meantime, the public works program is getting fully under way and is swelling the current records of the heavy industries. Private construction, however, is 20 per cent lower than a year ago.

London, Liverpool Exchanges Closed

LONDON, England, Aug. 6.—All markets here are closed today, owing to a bank holiday. Wheat and cotton markets in Liverpool are also closed.

TORONTO, Aug. 6.—(AP.)—The Toronto stock exchange and the Toronto mining markets were closed today for civic holiday as was the Winnipeg grain exchange.

Sugar Market.

NEW YORK, Aug. 6.—Raw sugar quiet early today and no sales were reported.

Sugar futures opened unchanged to 1 point lower, but eased later under increased liquidation by tired longs and selling by houses with Cuban connections. The inactivity in the spot market and belief that refiners had secured more sugar last week than reported seemed to restrict trading. September contracts sold off from 1.78 to 1.77, and December from 1.81 to 1.82, or 2 to 3 points below the previous close, with the market at midday quiet and ruling around the lows.

Refined sugar was unchanged. Prices were quoted at 4.75 for fine granulated by refiners and at 4.70 for re-sale offerings.

Chicago Butter Market.

Live poultry—Turkeys, 14; toms, 10@12; hens, 8@12½; broilers, 13@19; roosters, 8@9; ducks, 10@11½; geese, 5@8.

NEW YORK BOND MARKET

NEW YORK, Aug. 6.—(AP.)—Transactions in the most active bonds on the New York Stock Exchange today were as follows (000 omitted in sales column; United States bonds in dollars and thirty-seconds of dollars):

BOX NUMBER REPLIES:
The Sun-Telegraph maintains a complete and efficient "Box Number" service for the accommodation of classified ad writers, without extra charge. The Box Number in lieu of advertiser's own address is counted as two words in figuring cost of advertisements. Answers may be picked up at the Sun-Telegraph Main Office at Telegraph Square, or at the Fifth Ave. Branch Office, corner Market. If replies to box number advertisements are to be mailed, postage must be paid for by advertiser.

ORDERING YOUR WANT AD:
You may MAIL your ad to "Classified Advertising Manager, Sun-Telegraph, Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania," or you may BRING it to the Sun-Telegraph Main Office at Telegraph Square or the Accommodation Office, corner Fifth Ave. and Market St., or you may PHONE your Want Ad to Grant 5400, "Want Ad Department." Charge it. Use the method most convenient to you.

SPECIAL PERSONAL SERVICE:
If you have some special need for which you require personal counsel on copy at your office, just call the Classified Advertising Manager and ask to have representative call. No extra charge.

CONTRACT RATES:
The Sun-Telegraph will submit to any professional advertiser special schedule of rates on yearly basis.

Memory Test

1—The major leagues adopted a 140-game schedule in 1919, but resumed a 154-game card the following year. In 1918, due to the World War, the season was abruptly ended on September 1.

2—The ban on spitball pitching was put into effect in the major leagues in 1920.

5—Jess Willard was 28 years old when he took up boxing as a white hope in the scramble to return the heavyweight championship to the white race. He knocked out Jack Johnson four years later to accomplish this purpose.

Cast Into Eden

By HENRY C. ROWLAND

CHAPTER XV.

"Your wicker thing is terrible. You'll get warped or cramps or something. Cold, too, if it turns showery. The hillside is covered with ferns up to your waist. Couldn't we gather some?"

"I tried to pull one and the stems are like cod-line. Just as tough. If we had a scythe or machete or something . . ."

They acted on this. With two bottles smashed carefully on a stone so that the bottom served as a cup for the hand and the jagged spurs for cutting, they set out for the slope, carrying two open crate boxes. It was nearly dark when they returned with these latter stuffed with the big aromatic ferns. One box they carried from either end between them, and the other Jerome held African porter fashion on his head with a fern pad.

"Tomorrow we'll get as many more," he said, "but these will help us through tonight."

Nothing had been seen of the interesting if divided gorilla family. This night proved the best so far, partly because of a safer feeling, partly because of harder fatigue and softer beds. Also hardship is comparative and as previous comfort became more removed the present lack was easier to bear.

MAKE POLITE CALLS

Two more days and nights passed. The gorilla family made their polite calls, always in three parties. Mamma and the two younger children came in the morning. Papa and the debutante daughter came early in the afternoon. The prankish youth appeared to be persona non grata with both groups. He trailed alone and still declined close contact. They did not waste hospitality on him and after slinking about in the thicket and peering at them he would give his mocking cry and make off.

"I balk at being barmaid for a bunch of gorillas . . . or nounou for a baby one. They'll get less as we establish the entente cordiale more firmly."

"This island must have once been a Jesuit mission colony," Jerome said. "A good deal was under cultivation. The jungle's grown in on the plantations."

"Apes like to live in ruins. The homo yearning in them perhaps. My father's ship was stationed in Manila early in the Insurrection. Dad told me that a band of big half-tamed monkeys inhabited some of the old buildings round the First Reserve Hospital. They'd make raids on the officers' white shoes that were set out in the sun after being blanco-ed by the muchachos. They'd carry the shoes to a peaked roof and set them in a row with the heels caught over the ridge pole, carefully arranged in order of size."

"A big old jungle monkey with side whiskers. He was an animated cartoon for our C. O. Everybody called him General Otis. An officer patient got sore one day when the old macac was rigging his show and ordered the sentry to take a shot at him. The man drew a bead on the monkey's head up above, then grounded his rifle, saluted, and said: 'I daren't, Sir! 'Twould be trayson, Sir!'"

They discovered also that the gorillas were not the only fauna on the island imported from overseas.

"Moufflon," Jerome said. "He may have brought them from Corsica."

Up to this time they had not closely examined the variety of fruit trees in their compound—if one can have a compound without any containing barrier. They found a considerable variety of citrus fruit and bananas ranging from the delicious little "fig" to the big cooking plantain. And there were gauves, white and red, custard apples and mangoes; practically all the varieties belonging to that zone.

"Astonishing that the gorillas could be taught to leave the fruit alone even when the master's away."

They went over to inspect this fresh mystery. It was hard to understand why one should bother to fasten a sign to an inconspicuous tree that was buried at the far end and middle of a citrus grove. Yet here was the fact. Moreover it was a new sign about ten by eighteen inches, carefully wired to the tree at the height of a man's head, and its lettering in Spanish was neatly done. Jerome read, then translated it:

Linda was staring up at the branches. She said in a low voice: "Jerry, did you ever see such gorgeous fruit? What is it?"

AMAZING TREE

The tree was the size of a young papaya but fuller in size and shape, and less tall proportionately. There was similarity of structure and foliage but these were not the same. The amazing detail was in the fruit itself.

There were seven luscious pendants shaped like Bartlett pears but twice the size. These seemed to be in graded process of ripening except for one that was in its early prime. It was smooth and lustrous, the richest quality of virgin gold except at its greatest fullness, where a delicate rose color shone through. There was something strangely enticing about the exquisite fruit.

The finder of a great pearl or nugget of pure gold or even such of the precious gems as do not require cutting and polishing to reveal their glorious texture is said to experience first a sense of awe. It was this emotion that was felt by Jerome and Linda as they looked up at this triumph of nature's handicraft, hanging so temptingly about 20 feet above their heads.

As they stared at it the late sun sent a ray under a sheltering spray of leaves when the gorgeous fruit glowed as if translucent and lighted by some living rosy golden flame within.

"Nectar of the gods." There was a covetous note in Linda's voice. Perhaps it was this that struck into Jerome with the full force of analogy.

He said: "The Forbidden Fruit. This about puts the final touch."

"On what?"

"The Garden of Eden motif. This little Paradise; the friendly beasts, obedient to the injunctions. Everything provided. 'Male and female created He them.' And all the rest of it."

She kept on staring at the fruit. "What can it be?"

A NEW FRUIT

"Don't know. I never saw anything like it. I don't believe there is anything like it anywhere else in the world. A lusus naturae . . . sport of nature."

"That may be. Part effort and part accident. That may be the reason he's hung the hands-off sign on the tree."

"Anyhow, why not?"

"Linda, you're arguing like Eve. Without even the bad influence of the Serpent. We're living in this man's house and eating his food and generally enjoying his bounties. The least we can do is to respect his single order."

"Yes, and stole our clothes. We've been over all that. I've kept my hands off his chests and we needed the clothes and bedding and stuff that must be inside them. But we don't need this fruit."

"It is so wonderful. And begging to be enjoyed."

"Never mind that. Those poor, semi-conscious brutes that live on fruit and love it obey the laws of this place. Even the macaw has let it alone, though how you can put the fear of God in a macaw beats me. Every creature here seems to do the right thing, so certainly we ought to and can."

Linda did not answer.

Synopsis

Jerome Crain, young naval architect, and a beautiful society girl, named Linda, land on a strange island in the Caribbean after having fled from a quarantined yacht. Their skiff is mysteriously set adrift and their clothes stolen, yet there is no other sign of a living human at first. Intermittently, however, blood-curdling cries come from the jungle. The mystery deepens with the finding of a well-kept though deserted plantation They take refuge in a small house there. That night, Linda's slip is torn off by some unseen creature and again the eerie scream is heard. Linda, frightened, insists that Jerome stay near her. The mystery of the night prowlers and stolen clothing clears with the appearance of a mother and father gorilla and their cub, and still another hairy monster decked out in Jerome's shirt. Jerome recites poetry and feeds the animals sugarwater to keep them from getting vicious. The dislike which Linda and Jerome had for one another changes to admiration for each other's courage in the face of real danger.

Junior Patrol Mail Box

And we're sorry if we didn't make that clear before this. We like the way "fellows" sounds. We think it's a good word. And we think that girls can be good fellows just as well as boys.

So unless we can think of a better word, "fellows" means all Junior Patrol members—boys and girls. Is that all right with you, girls? We surely hope you like it because we think that when you call boys and girls "fellows" you mean that they are all comrades and friends.

WINNING LETTERS

We printed the prize winners' names Saturday. Now today have a look at the letters they wrote to win their prizes. Here is the one Arlene Colyer, of 1454 Marlboro avenue, Wilkinsburg, wrote to win first prize:

"The pet I would prefer is a cat. The reason why I would like to have a cat is that a cat has more enemies. Dogs chase cats and sometimes bad boys throw stones at cats. And so I would like to have a cat because cats have to have friends. If you treat a cat nice it will be your friend just the same as a dog would."

Now here is the second prize letter, written by Henry Mann, of 5201 Ellsworth avenue, East End. He says:

"This is my first letter to the Junior Patrol since I became a member. I am 12 years old and I would prefer a German police dog as a puppy. Then as he grew older I would train him to protect the house and in winter sleep on the floor beside my bed.

"When I would go to the store, I would take him along to help carry things. After I was through buying in the stores I would go to the butcher and ask for scraps for him. I would name him Rex."

JUNIOR PATROL PLEDGE

I promise to do my best to make my parents proud of me.

Love Accident

Daily Short Short-Story

By HELEN FAIRLAMB

Katherine was in the living room looking bleakly out the window when her older brother Jack joined her. She didn't look up. This was strange, for usually she was dancing or skipping about the house.

He went to her side and laid his hand gently on her shoulder. "What's the trouble, sis?"

She didn't reply. He bent down. Tears were stealing down her lovely face. "Sis, what's wrong, child?"

"Don't be silly," he entreated. "Tell me what's bothering you."

She hesitated, swallowed noisily a few times, looked up beseechingly, and again she shook her head as if lacking the final ounce of courage to confide in him.

He pulled over a chair with his foot, dropped into it, and, facing her, seized her hands and demanded: "Now, see here, young woman, you tell me what's eating you."

Between sobs Katherine told Jack her story. It ran about like this: Six months ago while attending a community dance she met a young chap named Dick Rollin with whom she had fallen in love. He, apparently, returned her affection, but not once had he so much as spoken a word of his emotional reaction. And last night when he had taken her home from the dance he had stepped into the darkened hallway with her. She had moved closer to him, so close that her lips were almost against his. And what had he done? Imagine! Of all things! He had turned and almost ran from the house.

"Just bashful, darling," soothed Jack. "How could he resist your charms, sis?" he laughed softly. "Poor little sis. . . . The first time she's ever been in love and now the man scorns her!"

He stood up and laughed, then, as he took in the shaking shoulders of Katherine, he was instantly contrite. "Forgive me, darling. I was just trying to spoof you. . . . When are you going to see this chap again?"

"Tonight . . . there's another dance at the community hall. . . . He has asked me to go with him."

Jack patted her shoulder, stooped and kissed her. "You let old Jack handle this situation. I know all about such little matters. Why, this is a simple little problem for me. . . . Just dry away your tears, honey. . . . And tonight I'll have that young man proposing to you."

Katherine tried to smile. She failed. But the shadows seemed to leave her eyes as she gazed up at him adoringly. "I'm glad I told you, Jack. I feel better now."

He suddenly became serious. "Sure you want to marry this chap, sis?"

"I'm sure, Jack. I've told mother and dad about him. They know his people. He's in the insurance business. He . . . he's the sort of man I've always dreamed of marrying."

Jack nodded understandingly. "I know, sis . . . I know . . ." He smiled broadly as he stared down at her. . . . "All right, child. . . . You go to your dance. By the way, does he drive?"

"Yes, he has his own car."

"Straight up Main street."

"How does he come home?"

"We always come back the same way."

"See that you do that tonight, will you?"

He left the room and went hastily out of the house. Straight to the trucking office of Tim Horan he sped and there he led Tim to an inner office and talked feverishly for several minutes. At first Tim shook his head emphatically. Obviously the scheme Jack advanced was not being well received. But Jack persisted, and in the end the two men gravely shook hands. But each seemed to be hiding an inner glow.

It was nearing midnight. Dick Rollin was driving his car slowly down Main street, toward the home of Katherine Maynard, who sat beside him staring into the night.

Katherine tried to start a conversation. He seemed to find difficulty in replying. She even tried to discuss the insurance business. But, as before, Dick simply couldn't talk coherently. Finally, Katherine gave up in despair and settled down in the corner of the seat determined to utter no more words until they arrived home; then she'd tell him once and for all that she never wanted to see him again . . . never . . . But the word evoked a little ache around her heart.

As they were turning down a cross street toward her home a truck came barging out and struck their machine, sidewiping it and forcing it against the curb. Katherine shrieked. Dick swore. Then Katherine fainted . . . When she came to he was cradling her in his arms and kissing her wildly, calling her darling. It was so pleasant that Katherine closed her eyes and lay there reveling in the ecstasy of his caresses.

She was nestling thus when along came brother Jack. He picked up Katherine and whispered: "Hurt, sis?"

As Jack neared his home out of the shadows stepped Tim Horan. Jack wrung his hand, slapped him on the back, then, whistling, went into the house, a beatific grin creasing his face.

Tomorrow: "Rain," by Charles F. Stool, is a poignant story of a girl aerialist who fell from a trapeze while the Big Top was packed; she lost the use of her legs and passed her days watching her flowers unfold under the sun. And in the end those flowers she loved saved her from a life of invalidism.

COOK-COOS

By TED COOK

A national campaign has been launched to induce motorists to toot their horns three times whenever they see another motorist violate a law.

Maybe motorists can be induced to toot three times whenever they hear another motorist disturbing the peace by tooting three times.

WHEN MEN WERE MEN

(Lamar, Mo. Democrat—4 Years Ago Item.)

"Chas. W. Penneman, H. E. West, Chas. Gardener and F. E. McCreary came in from St. Scott on their wheels Sunday morning, arriving at 10:30 and returned at 1:20, making the round trip of 100 miles in a day. The boys struck some very muddy road, having to stop and cut the tickle grass and mud from their wheels, so they would revolve, but they were determined to make a century run regardless of the conditions of the roads."

Q. and A. DEPARTMENT

Dear Aunt Bella:

I suppose you are familiar with London society. Is it true that the members of the nobility, when eating in their shirtsleeves, eschew suspenders?

Curious.

Ans.—So you suppose I am familiar with London society. Well if I was you I wouldn't be so quick to condemn unless I had the facts. I might add, however, that on several occasions London society tried to get a little too familiar with me. And if a gent eschews his suspenders it must (heh! heh!) be bad taste.

WEEP SOME MORE, MY LADY.

"It is as healthy for a woman to cry as it is for a man to swear—a woman's tears release pent up emotions, thus performing a necessary catharsis."—Louis Arnett, psychologist.

Curse their wives in manner rude
The husbands, thus, by nature's stealth
Promote (hooray!) the public health!
Her soul is flushed with bitter brine,
First thing she knows, she's feeling fine!
How wise is Nature! Ain't it cute
And so the villain is, in truth,
Heroic! (But, of course, uncouth.)
Move their men to profane jeers—
Gosh! It certainly works neat.

* * *

All in all, there's probably nothing quite so disillusioning as finding that you're not disillusioned yet.

California is shipping "canned" roses. You send them to your best girl after you've married her. They look nice on the grocery shelf.

When we read about some of those little European countries threatening to mobilize we feel like crying out loud: "Ossifer, call a cop!"

That rumbling noise over Europe sounds mightily like "Deutschland Uber Alles," as sung by Germany's one-time famous singer of 20 years ago, Big Bertha.

After a Frenchman and Russian had fought a duel over a beautiful young woman they kissed each other. Seems that under the new French code of honor if you don't kill a man you've got to kiss him.

Maybe Thomas Jefferson did steal the idea for the Declaration of Independence, but you can't put a man in jail who has been dead 150 years, and whose only crime was wanting everybody kept out of jail.

How to Enjoy the Summer

First of all, we shall tell you how to preserve the little mementoes and souvenirs of the summer. The nails from SO that tire can be woven into a beautiful what-not to hang under the picture of your rich Aunt Ella and other disappointments.

Very few people know how to preserve a hotel bill in its natural colors. Like the rainbow shad, a hotel bill loses its iridescent tints and glorious hues the minute the ink dries on it.

Dampen a blotter with your perspiration. Lay the bill out flat. Then allow your wife to perspire on another blotter. Lay this on the bill. Then push over a chimney and a small but neat garage on top the blotters. Leave until called for.

Some people think a hotel bill is heavy enough without all this added weight. However, we are telling you how to do a tilting, and we do not care to handy words with upstarts.

If you can make blueprints it would be nice to have a map of the 48 states with all the wrong roads and directions on it. Just forget where you were headed for and put in the spots where you landed.

Quite a few folks are starting bird collections with the insects that bit them. This will bring up the old question of field and stream. Is it sporting to slap a sitting mosquester? Or should you first allow the dogs to flush him out of your whiskers? We'll take that up later.

One of our artistic friends has just completed a magnificent rock garden made of boulders he stumbled over in the dark. He got an entire set of rocks together in five minutes. We admit he was an experienced stumbler. But anybody can learn in 10 easy lessons.

The hotels fooled us this year. Formerly they put their names on the towels to protect them, and then discovered that's why we stole 'em. However, it is easy to get together a very fine group of anonymous linen. In this way you can find out how long you stopped at a hotel, just by counting its towels.

There are other small ways of keeping summer memories alive. But for the present, the ways we have just told you are small enough.

The Tax Delusion

The Theory That Only the Rich Suffer From Government Extravagances Is Fallacious

With various units of government in the United States on a spending spree, dispensing at least 40 per cent of the current national income, it is important to be fully aware of where we are going.

The soundness of the federal fiscal policy hinges on fulfilling President Roosevelt's pledge to taper off expenditures after the economic emergency. The Chief Excutive has set the goal of balancing expenditures against revenues in the fiscal yar 1936.

Mr. Roosevelt's capacity to do this prudent thing will depend on two factors:

First, on the resumption of sufficient private spending and investment to provide full employment. This entails a cessation of business baiting and extreme experimentation, and a new willingness on the part of government to work hand in hand with business leaders.

Second, the effort to balance the budget necessitates the building up of a sound public opinion in advance.

In alluding to this situation, Joseph Stagg Lawrence, of the Review of Reviews, observed:

> "As matters stand in this democracy the 25 voters who are unaware of a direct duty to support the government, but delightfully aware of the favors which that government can scatter, choose the President and the Congressmen who decide how much the one taxpaying citizen shall contribute. As a Congressman it is manifestly more important to please the 25 than the one."

As a matter of fact, the burden of financing the government falls on the shoulders OF ALL THE GAINFULLY EMPLOYED CITIZENS.

Where the corporation pays taxes, it in reality merely acts as a collector for the government, and adds the item of taxes to the cost and ultimately to the selling price of goods.

If tax rates should become destructive, the processes of trade and employment become impaired, and the adverse effects are distributed widely among the whole population.

It is a snare and a delusion to assume that only the wealthy suffer from extravagance and waste in governmental spending.

The curse of our present unscientific tax system is that it disguises the important contribution made by the masses to the upkeep of bureaucracy.

A widely diffused general manufacturers' sales tax would not only be an excellent yielder of revenue, but would also awaken the ordinary citizen to the fact that in the nature of things he must foot the bill.

Public Works Jeopardized

It Is to Be Hoped Council Will Override the Veto Of the Liberty Tube Project

Mayor W. N. McNair's action in vetoing the enabling ordinance for the Liberty Tube plaza project jeopardizes the 24 million dollar county public works program.

While the Mayor has been opposed to the proposal to charge tolls for the use of the tubes, the veto is based on objections to the plans for the plaza adopted by the County Authority. Mr. McNair desires a plaza which would cost $800,000 more than the one million, four hundred thousand dollars allocated for the project by the Federal Public Works Administration.

There may be merit in the Mayor's ideas on the subject, but he has no right to imperil the whole public works program because he cannot have his way in one particular feature of it.

Unless the County Authority and the PWA yield to the Mayor, Council should override the veto, and if that cannot be done until absentee members return to the city action should be delayed until then.

It will be disgraceful if bickering over minor details deprives Allegheny County of the new bridges and tunnels which are so badly needed.

To Aid Metropolitan Plan

The Request to the County to Promote the Project Cannot Be Dismissed Lightly

William E. Armstrong, president of the Allegheny County Association of Township Commissioners, has asked the County Commissioners to conduct an educational campaign to promote the adoption of the metropolitan plan. The citizens of the county will vote on the metropolitan plan next year.

The metropolitan plan, it will be remembered, calls for the inclusion of all the cities, boroughs and townships of the county in Pittsburgh, but allows them to retain much of the autonomy that they now enjoy. It gives Greater Pittsburgh the official status in the census of a city of a million and a half people, with the prestige and commercial advantages that go with such a position; but it protects the suburban communities from forcible annexation. Most important of all, perhaps, it authorizes certain governmental changes which would reduce expenses and lighten the taxpayers' burden.

Whether it is properly a function of the County Commissioners to promote the plan may be debatable. But Mr. Armstrong's proposal, which has been indorsed by the Allied Boards of Trade, cannot be dismissed lightly; for there is much to be said in its favor.

When the metropolitan plan was up for consideration some years ago, it was promoted by a commission financed by the Commonwealth. There is precedent, accordingly, for the creation of a county department or bureau, as suggested by Mr. Armstrong, to educate the voters as to what is involved in the plan.

Our Own Laocoon Group

(Copyright, 1934.)

Like the serpent in mythology which killed Laocoon and his two sons, bureaucracy has the American people in its winding toils.

Bureaus at Washington impose arbitrary rules on business, and the same bureaus, sitting as judges, interpret the rules they have made.

Other bureaus regulate labor—the labor of farmers who are told what they must sow and reap; the labor of widowed mothers who are forbidden to make artificial flowers at home while caring for their children; the labor of clerks and mechanics and so on.

Meanwhile, the cost of our bureaucracy grows appalling.

Next year we shall begin paying for what is borrowed and spent this year, and also the Federal deficit will have to be paid off.

Until then, as Federal Administrator Hopkins has said, "the American people do not know what it is to be taxed."

Are the decrees of our American Olympians to be as immutable as that?

Late—He's Divorced

By Winifred Black

A San Francisco matron divorced her husband the other day because he was always late to dinner.

She said that she worked and slaved to make a pleasant home for husband and every day she cooked him a nice warm dinner, with a roast or a broil, cauliflower in cream, mashed potatoes, pickles and everything.

And sometimes husband came home to dinner on time, but mostly he came home when the cream on the cauliflower had all dried and the gravy had bubbled away. And sometimes he didn't come home at all—thank you.

There was one night especially, when she had roast lamb—oh, the nicest little leg of lamb you ever saw—all brown and everything, with green peas in the old American fashion, cooked with butter and cream, if you please, and lots of gravy—and a green apple pie she made herself, with a crust as tender as the first kiss of love, and he telephoned that he would be a little late.

And what time do you think it was when he got home?—four o'clock in the morning! And not a word would he tell about where he'd been or anything.

The judge gave her the divorce not because husband was late to dinner so often and not even because he stayed out all night, but because he wouldn't tell her where he had been.

The judge seemed to think that any man who wouldn't take the trouble to tell some kind of a story, when his wife had been crying all night, really wasn't worth a wife, and between you and me I agree with him.

But maybe the poor man just stayed down town as a gesture of freedom, like the slave who refused to obey his master for once just to show that he was a man as well as a slave after all.

I know a man who had a perfectly good wife and a perfectly good home and a perfectly good business and he ran away from them all and went down to South America and worked as a dock laborer.

His wife "managed" about his clothes and she managed his bank account and she "managed" his friendships. He said that when it got so that she hid his favorite tie because she didn't like it and told him when to get a clean handkerchief he just threw up his hands and disappeared.

Wise Words

Do not all that you can do; spend not all that you have; believe not all that you hear, and tell not all that you know.

LISTEN, WORLD

By Elsie Robinson

His Truth Goes Marching On!

For days—during which, time had ceased to have any meaning—the crippled city had cowered under an indefinable terror. Men wandered aimlessly along the empty streets . . . collecting briefly in dark, restless clots . . . went straggling on again. Something more demoralizing than the halted traffic, more deeply menacing than machine guns or bombs, had them in its grip.

Some remembered the earthquake and fire of 1906, saw again those desolate, blasted ruins. Then, too, there had been that feeling—harder to bear than any physical anguish—that the very foundations of life had been swept away. Strikes could be mediated. Wreckage could be rebuilt. But for that spiritual demoralization, there seemed no cure.

Passing men eyed each other, tried to speak. But their voices faltered and stopped. The silence tightened.

Suddenly, from some uncertain source, there came the sound of music. Faint, at first . . . muffled . . . rising and falling on listless gusts of air, the song took shape . . . spread. Blocks away, men stopped, looked questioningly at each other, then turned . . . began moving toward Union Square.

Down cobble-stoned alleys. Up glittering boulevards. Past packing box barricades . . . gun mounts . . . crates of rotting vegetables . . . mounds of unmoved freight. Past wrecked trucks, demolished tracks. Past exquisitely inlaid doorways of crystal and chrome opening into store aisles, dark and empty as tunnels.

Past pools of plate glass, in which floated webs of lace, gleaming pelts of fur, strings of pearls, slippers with rhinestone heels . . . All the lovely litter of a great city's luxurious life . . . the men moved slowly—staring like sleep walkers—toward the music.

As they moved, as the music grew nearer, clearer . . . as the sense of the song stole over them . . . something happened. At first their feet had lagged, in the apathy born of weeks of wandering. Presently they quickened . . . rose and fell with a stronger beat, as though seeking an almost forgotten rhyme. Backs straightened. Lax jaws tightened.

Suddenly, rounding in from Geary, Powell, Stockton, Post, the music broke full upon them from the boxed radio enclosure at the center of Union Square. Full, strong, like a long shout it came rolling.

"MINE EYES HAVE SEEN THE GLORY OF THE COMING OF THE LORD."

Flaring, flaming, like a great flag flinging its challenge at the darkening skies, at the cowering streets, poured the song. Their song. The Battle Hymn of Their Republic. Once, as boys they had learned that song. Once, as men, they had clung to it. Then, something had happened . . . something that seemed to rob life and men of plan and prop.

But now the song was back! Now, once more, hope stirred in them, pride swept through men. Hope for themselves . . . for all men. Pride in that nation which gave all men a chance!

Their eyes burned. Their dry lips moistened. Forgetting their rags, forgetting their bewilderment, their anger and hunger and fear, they surged forward. Up the tall hills of San Francisco, down to the wide waters, went the fighting cry—

"Mine eyes have seen the glory
Of the coming of the Lord,
He is trampling out the vineyard
He has loosed the mighty lightning
Of his terrible swift sword.

* * *

His Truth is marching on! Past the wreckage of our anger, past the litter of our greed, God's Truth, God's love, God's Land go on forever!

Rhyming Optimist

By Aline Michaelis

Oh Joy

Though, sometimes, long I woo it,
This joy, beloved of all,
It may not heed my pleading
Or answer to my call.

Then, like a swift wind veering,
More light than breeze-tossed petals
Yet keener than a knife.

I know not where it goes;
Though, with me, it is fragrant
And vivid as a rose.

It sends me no forerunner
To say when it will start,
And all I know of joy is
Its singing in my heart!

ABOARD S. S. EMPRESS OF CANADA,
Aug. 5.

To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

Fine boat, fine trip, interesting people from the four corners of the earth going and coming. Everybody feeling optimistic and telling of how their country is recovering. No war talk. That's all in the editorials at home. Lots of Japanese and Chinese on board. Arrive in Yokohama next Saturday morning. Miss Floyd Gibbons on this trip. We had a great time coming out before. Did the President ever get home? I think he had a great trip. He was feeling fine.

Marry Go Round

By Helen Rowland

Little Girl, What Now?

What chance has a girl, today, of finding a genuine, non-breakable love and a non-skidding marriage? What sort of deal are women getting under the present love-code?

* * *

* * *

"Dear Miss Rowland:

"I hope you will take the time to listen to a young girl's woes.

"The older generation blame us for being wild, for this, that and what have you? But what chance does a girl have?

* * *

"My crowd are mostly business girls and all of good class. Naturally, we want some relaxation and fun, including masculine companionship. But we haven't a chance!

* * *

"You meet a nice-looking, seemingly well-bred boy, ONCE. And the first time he takes you out . . . the battle is on! Now, what girl enjoys a boxing-match, when all she wants is an evening's pleasant companionship? And do lots of girls rush into hasty marriages, just in order to escape being eternally and casually mauled?"

* * *

The foregoing letter, which has been highly expurgated, comes from a girl in a state once famous for its "chivalry." Is it an example of what the average young girl is getting, these days, as a substitute for "love"?

As for the older woman, either married or single, you can read her history in the newspapers every morning. At this moment of writing, three wives are suing for freedom from their gay but elderly spouses. The most interesting case being that of the beautiful Mrs. Bertrand Russell against her famous 62-year-old husband. The co-respondent is alleged to be a 20-year-old gal. Ah me—how the heart softens, as the arteries harden!

* * *

It doesn't seem to make much difference whether the girl is 16 or 46, whether she is wild or tame, whether she is married or single, it's the same old deal, which was handed her by the post-war generation. And not until a whole generation of women have the courage to rise and protest against the ridiculous situation in which women find themselves, today, will they get a better deal. So, Little Girl, what now?

Fritz Thyssen, the Steel Magnate, Is Declared to Be the Real Power Behind Hitler in Germany

By Edwin C. Hill

WHO IS the real power in Germany today? Not Hitler, the Chancellor, but a graying man of 60, Germany's steel king and one of the great munitions magnates of the world, Fritz Thyssen. It was he who put Hitler in power and maintains him in power. He does it for two reasons. He hates the French. He hates Socialism. If he cannot have the old monarchy, which doubtless he would prefer, he will take that form of Fascism which goes under the name of National Socialism, but which is very far from Socialism indeed.

European observers who closely study the ebb and flow of the tides of opinion within the reich believe that Hitler will survive as long as Fritz Thyssen wants him to survive. They believe that the bloody Saturday, wherein those individuals who would have thrown Germany to the left, to radical Socialism, were destroyed ruthlessly, was as much Thyssen's doing, if not more, than Hitler's. They believe that Thyssen, head of the Vereinigte Stahlwerke, the German Steel Trust, looks forward to another "Day" when German arms will reconquer from the French the lost provinces of Alsace and Lorraine and the iron and coal fields which are the basis of the steel king's power.

* * *

French Recognize Him as Enemy

THE FRENCH, clear-headed and acute, recognize in Fritz Thyssen their most dangerous enemy and make no secrecy of their belief that Germany is rearming rapidly with Thyssen's direct aid and support.

Who is this silent man behind the throne of Adolph Hitler? He is one of the most interesting personalities in Europe. It was his father, August Thyssen, who established in the Ruhr, at Muehlheim, the vast steel industry which the son now controls, and which has relations with the other great munitions makers of Europe.

The beginning of the family was obscure and humble. August Thyssen founded his steel industry in a small barn which still stands at Muehlheim. He built up his small business with coal and iron fields in the Ruhr and in Lorraine. Amazingly thrifty and self-centered, a man of tremendous will and stubbornness, old August Thyssen employed 30,000 men in his steel mills, in his power stations and on his railway and steamship lines when the great war came on.

August and son, Fritz, made enormous profits out of the war and then fell into difficulties when the Peace of Versailles turned the Ruhr over to the French as a territorial hostage. Most of the German industrialists of the Ruhr lacked the spirit or the contumacy to resist the French when that occupation came, but not the Thyssens.

Fritz flatly refused to obey French decrees and regulations. He was tried and sentenced to prison and went to jail with his shoulders back and chin up, saying aloud that it was the happiest day of his life and the proudest. He had never liked the French, although he had found it convenient and profitable to do business with them, to expand and extend his industry into French territory, but from the day of his imprisonment he has hated France and the French with an unholy hatred.

During the Socialist regime in the ill-fated German republic, Fritz Thyssen, now at the head of the vast Thyssen interests, was usually at loggerheads with the pacifistic Socialist governments and very bluntly described the Socialists as the worst enemies of the German state. It was this same Fritz Thyssen who originated the counter-revolution against the Socialists which ended in the downfall of the republic and the scrapping of the Weimar constitution.

* * *

Helped Organize The Steel Helmets

HE BECAME an intense conservative, helped organize the Steel Helmet organization, which was frankly out for a restoration of the monarchy, and when he saw that cat wouldn't jump, turned to Fascism and the little man with the toothbrush mustache, Adolph Hitler. He rounded up his fellow industrialists and urged them to back Hitler and the Nazi cause. He threw all the power of his prestige and enormous wealth behind Hitler.

If European comment is to be believed, he urged Hitler to scrap the Treaty of Versailles and to rouse the German people to a new war of revenge. He was able to do all this because of the tremendous weight and scope of his power in industry and finance. Back of him were the great banking interests and heavy industry. And now he stands like a shadow behind the clamorous Hitler, silent but all powerful, with the almost indestructible power of money and vast material possession.

He has abolished Socialism. Some day—so the French fear—he may seek to abolish France. It is exceedingly probable that it was a clear realization of the plans and purposes of Herr Thyssen which prompted Barthou, French Foreign Minister, to make the round of Balkan states, encouraging them to stand with France against any change of the status quo set up at Versailles, and which prompted the cautious English Government to assure Barthou that England would again stand side by side with France if Germany, rearmed and bent on war, should again strike at the borders.

Anything can happen in Germany. Hitler may fall as Dollfuss fell, may be destroyed as Dollfuss was destroyed. And in the general cataclysm Fritz Thyssen might go with him. But as the cards lie in the strange game that is being played over the Rhine, Thyssen holds the trumps.

False Pretense Marks Philippine Plebiscite

By James T. Williams, Jr.

ACCORDING to Manila dispatches, the Philippine constitutional convention has opened "amid stormy scenes." This was to be expected. It is the inevitable result of the legislative monstrosity under which the Philippine people are compelled to proceed. This monstrosity—the so-called Philippine Independence Act—was lobbied through the late and unlamented seventy-third Congress by the hirelings of a coalition of special interests dominated by the Sugar Trust.

They must first accept the provisions of the law either by the vote of the Philippine Legislature or a convention called for that purpose. The act has already been accepted by the Legislature.

They must then formulate a constitution; this is the task upon which the convention now in session at Manila has just entered. There is no time limit upon completion of this next step.

Having drawn up a constitution and incorporated in it certain provisions which the law requires shall continue in effect until the final withdrawal of American sovereignty 10, 20 or even more years hence, the proposed organic law must then be submitted to the President of the United States for approval. If he finds that it conforms to the provisions of the Philippine Act he must so certify. If he finds that it does not, he must so inform the Philippine convention through the Governor General and indicate the changes which he desires made.

* * *

People to Vote On Constitution

THESE exchanges between the President and the Philippine constitutional convention may go on indefinitely but until an agreement has been arrived at on the provisions of the proposed constitution the status quo in the islands must continue.

When, as and if the President finally gets from Manila a constitution that he is willing to approve and certify, the Philippine people are then authorized to hold an election for ratification or rejection of the constitution.

The question really to be voted on at this election will be the ratification or rejection of a new form of insular government, not the question of whether the Philippine people really desire to be rid entirely of the protection of American sovereignty.

But under the law lobbied through Congress by the Sugar Trust and its sordid allies it is provided that "this vote," which is a vote for a new form of insular government, "shall be deemed an expression of the will of the people of the Philippine islands in favor of Philippine independence."

As a matter of fact the new form of insular government for which the proposed constitution will provide, gives the Philippine people more autonomy than they now have. This would involve less American control than is now exercised over their affairs. For example they would be permitted to elect their governor general, who is now appointed by the president.

* * *

Plebiscite Plan Unfair and Dishonest

THE ULTIMATE issue which will be determined by this vote for more autonomy will be that of complete independence from the United States in the indefinite future. No more dishonest and unfair prebiscite was ever forced upon a dependent people by the government pledged before the world to protect them from such injustice.

Under this crooked procedure forced upon the Philippine people by the lobby-ridden forces which passed this law the average island voter cannot foresee the ultimate economic consequences of complete divorce from the United States in the indefinite future. He cannot possibly anticipate what a majority vote for the Constitution providing for a new form of insular government, pending final separation, will finally inflict upon the Philippine people in the years to come.

This cowardly procedure is no less unfair to the American people. It condemns them to occupy for an indefinite number of years a position of responsibility in the Far East beyond their authority to discharge. Throughout the time that will elapse between the setting up of the temporary insular government, for which the proposed constitution provides, and the final withdrawal of American sovereignty from the Philippines, the United States will be wholly responsible for the conduct of the Philippine government, for the defense of the Philippine Islands against revolution from within or aggression from without, but its authority to discharge this responsibility will be very much less than it is today.
